Rail Wreck Inquiries Set For Today; Toll Now 77

Acting N. Y. Mayor Orders LIRR Speed Kept to 25 Miles; Dewey Plans Probe

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP).—New York City counted 77 dead and 332 injured today in the Long Island Railroad's Thanksgiving Eve crash—one of the bloodiest in the Nation's history.

Even before the last of the wreckage of the two passenger-jammed commuter trains was cleared away and mangled bodies removed, a public outcry demanded investigation and drastic remedy.

Queens County District Attorney Charles Sullivan, in whose jurisdiction the wreck occurred, promised prosecution if he found evidence of "criminal negligence."

Reduced Speed Ordered

Acting Mayor Joseph T. Sharkey termed recurring mishaps on the railroad "a crime" and ordered the line to reduce the speed of all trains to 25 miles on hour in the city limits.

Mayor Vincent Impellitteri cut short a Cuban vacation to hurry home. Before starting back he announced appointment of a four-man City committee to probe the disaster.

The State Public Service Commission and the railroad itself also will investigate.

The Public Service Commission investigation was ordered by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, vacationing in Miami Beach. Dewey termed the wreck "shocking" and said he had directed the PSC to look into "the circumstances of the wreck and of the entire management of the railroad."

Shortly after ordering the investigation, Dewey ended his vacation and booked plane passage for New York to take personal charge of the PSC inquiry.

He called the crash a "heart-rending demonstration that drastic action is necessary for the safety of the people of our State who use that railroad."

Trustee Removal Sought

J. Russel Sprague, County Executive of Nassau County, whose residents are among the chief users of the Long Island Railroad, said he would seek the immediate replacement of the railroad's present trustees.

He said in a statement the county would apply to the United States District Court for the removal of David E. Smucker and Hunter L. Delatour, the railroad trustees.

In their place, Sprague said, would be asked the appointment of a single new trustee "of nationally recognized experience in railroad management and operation."

Sprague, National Republican Chairman for the State of New York, said the court petition would be filed by Orin G. Judd, special Nassau County attorney on railroad litigation.

Worst Cold Of Fall Due In D. C. Today

Temperature Drop To 20s or Lower Forecast in Area

The rawest cold wave of the season, which brought a snowy and subzero Thanksgiving to the heart of the Nation, will blow into Washington late today.

Its effects here will be brisk winds, temperatures in the low 20s and possibly a few snowflakes, the weatherman said.

In the morning, before the chill is due to hit, the mercury should hover in the 40s. Washington's record low so far this season was the 27 recorded Wednesday.

The cold snap, sweeping out of the Canadian "icebox" yesterday, bit into western Pennsylvania, northwest Florida, northwest Texas and the eastern Rockies.

There were snow flurries in the Virginia mountains and much colder weather yesterday over much of the State.

District Has Sunny, Quiet Holiday

Traditional Turkey Plays Lead Role In Celebration; Thousands Away

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Washington celebrated Thanksgiving yesterday in brilliant sunshine but with mingled hopes and fears for a world neither at war nor in peace.

As was the case with the first Thanksgiving in 1621 and with the first national observance of the day in 1864, there were thanks for favors past and prayers for a brighter future.

The traditional turkey and trimmings (at prices a bit lower than last year) were in evidence everywhere—in homes, hotels and restaurants. President Truman, Mrs. Truman, daughter Margaret and Mrs. Truman's mother sat down to a 35-pound Pennsylvania-grown bird at 1:30 p. m. There were no guests at Blair House.

Mrs. Truman and Margaret attended Thanksgiving services at St. John's Episcopal Church, across Lafayette Park, but the President worked on official papers at home.

Trumans at White House

After dinner, the President, Mrs. Truman and Margaret strolled across Pennsylvania ave. and looked at reconstruction work on the White House. Mr. Truman pointed out to his family the new room partitions that are just going up. A crowd of sightseers gathered in front of the mansion while the presidential family was sightseeing, but few knew the Trumans were inside.

Vice President Alben W. Barkley spent his Thanksgiving Day in Bethesda Naval Hospital, where he is undergoing a physical check-up. Mrs. Barkley went to the hospital to have turkey dinner with him, and reported he was "fine" and is scheduled to return home today.

The President had asked in his annual proclamation that Americans pray for peace wherever they might be—at church or home or in the "busy walks of life, every day, everywhere." In Washington, churches were crowded to overflowing, with many prayers for Americans who knew no holida, in snowbound North Korea.

According to custom, thousands, perhaps 200,000, Washingtonians deserted the city over the holiday, many of them for the long week-end. National Airport was described by a guard as having been "a madhouse" on Thanksgiving Eve. At Union Station yesterday an information clerk said "things are sort of sleepy around here today."

For those who did stay in the city, there were numerous traditional sales in downtown stores. They attracted crowds of bargain seekers of cut-rate television sets and similar buys.

Cheer for Unfortunate

Church, charitable and religious groups joined to bring cheer to the unlucky and unfortunate. There were numerous special

Gondola Ad Sets Canals To Boiling

VENICE, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Venice faced a transport crisis today because its gondoliers object to the gay red-and-yellow gondola which plies the city's famous canals advertising Coca Cola.

"Take it off or we strike," the gondoliers said in an ultimatum to the City Council.

The Coca Cola Co. tried some time ago to get the gondoliers to paint coke signs on their gondolas. Shocked the watermen pointed out that the Venetian Senate ruled in the eighteenth century that all gondolas must be painted a sedate black. The company imported a gondolier from Verona, and he started to ply a luridly painted gondola bearing the advertising.

The council forwarded the ultimatum to Mayor Giovan-Battista Ciaquinte. He is a Communist, whose party likes to attack "Coca Cola imperialism."

So far no physical harm has been done to the Coca Cola gondolier but he has suffered the combined abuse of every passing gondolier and most of the city's population.

Senate Unit Will Discuss County Crime

Prince Georges Problems to Be Meeting Topic

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) yesterday said the question of investigating Prince Georges County crime conditions will be taken up in next week's meeting of the Senate Crime Inquiry Committee.

Kefauver, chairman of the special Senate Investigating Committee, said "we are very much interested" in Prince Georges County. "We know there are problems there."

He said the only question is whether the committee will find time to investigate in Prince Georges.

He pointed out there are many other aspects of the national crime investigation still to be completed. The committee's deadline for filing its report to the Senate is February 28, 1951.

A preliminary inquiry has already been started by staff investigators for the Kefauver committee in charges that gambling and other crime has flourished in Prince Georges County with protection of police and other officials.

First move of these investigators was to confer with William R. Hughes, Republican member-elect of the Maryland House of Delegates. He made county crime conditions a campaign issue.

After hearing Hughes, a decision to make a preliminary report on Prince Georges was reached by Downey Rice, assistant counsel, and John McCormick, investigator, of the Kefauver committee staff.

British Note Asks China To Quit War

Communist Regime Given Assurance That Manchuria Is Not Menaced

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP).—Britain disclosed today a direct appeal to Communist China to end the intervention of Chinese Communist troops in Korea. It was a clear bid for a Korean peace.

The action was announced as Communist China's first mission to the United Nations arrived in London on the way to New York to press charges before the Security Council that the United States is an aggressor.

The Foreign Office said Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin sent Chou En-Lai, the Communist Chinese Premier and Foreign Minister, a message of assurance yesterday that the U. N. forces in Korea "in no way endanger legitimate Chinese interests in the area."

The British idea was to make it crystal clear that the U. N. forces regard the Chinese Manchurian frontier as inviolate, though the Peiping radio said a week ago similar statements from President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson "are not convincing anyone here."

A foreign office spokesman said Britain still is consulting with the United States, France and British Commonwealth nations on possible ways to end the Korean war.

In his message to Chou, Bevin promised that U. N. forces in Korea will confine themselves to their stated objectives—restoring peace to the war-shattered country, uniting its northern and southern segments and giving it independence and democracy.

His reference to China's legitimate interests in the frontier area presumably referred primarily to the wide network of electric power sources in North Korea which fed Manchurian industries.

As a gesture of goodwill toward Peking, two members of the British Foreign Office were sent to the airport today to meet the nine Chinese delegates who are en route to New York to testify before the United Nations. They arrived by plane from Prague and took off again tonight.

The pressure for negotiations with China appears to stem from the same group of 70 Labor members of Parliament who signed three motions in the last few days implying criticism of British foreign policy. This group is calling for negotiations with Russia as well as with China with a view to securing a political settlement of differences.

27 GIs Freed by Chinese Reds Tell of Lecture at Liberation

AN AMERICAN HOSPITAL, Korea, Nov. 22 (Delayed)—(AP).—The Chinese Communists, apparently for propaganda purposes, have released 27 U. S. prisoners of war.

The group, freed near Allied lines Tuesday night, said the Reds treated them well. Some were wounded but none was in serious condition.

(The New York Herald Tribune reported that 300 South Koreans also were freed.)

Handshakes and a last-minute lecture on "American imperialism" preceded their liberation, the captives said. Then they were permitted to walk through the moonlight to the safety of their own lines.

The soldiers themselves said they believed their release was a propaganda move. Their Red captors told them to assure their fellow Americans that the Chinese Communists did not want war.

The Reds, they said, blamed the Korean fighting on "American imperialists," and called President Truman, General MacArthur and Secretary of State Dean Acheson "no-good capitalists."

"I had to agree with them as long as I was a prisoner," said one infantryman with a grin, "but that was only because I wanted to get home."

Planes brought the group to a United States Army hospital in Pyongyang. They were hungry, unshaven and weary.

Twenty-three, from the Eighth Regiment of the United States First Cavalry Division, were captured near Unsan in early November. The other four were from the Twenty-fourth Division's Nineteenth Regiment.

The hospital commandant prohibited use of any of the prisoner's names. A sergeant told this story:

The Chinese attacked from the north on October 30, at 12:30 a. m. The sergeant, in a ditch, was watching the fight when he heard someone yell, "My God, here they are."

"I looked around and the first thing I saw was a long bayonet on the end of a rifle," he said. "I fired once and missed. I fell to the ground, and the Red soldier shot me in the right side. Soon a kid fell on top of me and the Chinese soldiers shot him twice.

"The kid saved my life. I don't know who he was. He died while

Much Data on A-Reactors, Long Secret, to Be Revealed

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Through a British-Canadian-United States agreement, the three nations are about to release a wealth of hitherto secret material about low-power atomic reactors, in order to speed and advance the training of atomic scientists.

The release is made possible by the fact that the disclosures will "not aid rival nations in the development of military applications of atomic energy."

Low power reactors, the Atomic Energy Commission declared yesterday, in announcing the revised guide to declassification, "cannot be used for producing atomic weapons or power."

But, on the other hand, the new information to be released "will be useful largely in advanced courses in reactor physics." For example, the AEC said, "it will now be possible for instructors to use specific data obtained from actual experiments, instead of discussing reactor technology in general and theoretical terms."

The new information will emerge in a series of technical papers and articles which will be cleared for publication under the declassification system. They will give de-

Holiday Accidents Claim 158 Lives; May Set Record

By The Associated Press

Violent deaths over the Thanksgiving holiday appeared certain to set a new high record.

Total accidental deaths between 6 p. m. Wednesday and 5 p. m. Thursday (local time) were 158. This included 77 killed when two jammed Long Island trains crashed Wednesday night.

The Thanksgiving Day record was set last year, when a total of 181 died, including 14 killed in tornadoes. But by Thanksgiving afternoon a year ago the total was only 69.

Deaths on the highways this year amounted to 65 compared with 52 in the same period last year. Miscellaneous deaths this year, including the Long Island crash, totaled 93 against 17 in 1949.

Nationalists' Complaint Is Kept Alive

Political Committee Recommends It Be Sent To Little Assembly

LAKE SUCCESS, Nov. 23 (AP).—The U. N. Political Committee kept alive today Nationalist China's complaint that the Soviet Union engineered the Communist civil war in China.

The committee decided to send the complaint to the Little Assembly for another year's study. In effect this put the charges on the shelf, but American backers of the move were happy the committee did not drop it completely.

The committee voted, 35 to 17, with 7 abstentions, for a Syrian proposal that the Little Assembly take over the complaint once more and report back to the 1951 General Assembly. A combination of American and Middle Eastern votes accounted for the majority and the full Assembly is expected to approve the committee action shortly.

Chinese Reds Due Today

The Little Assembly, boycotted by the Russian bloc, had the complaint before it all last year but never took any action. Some delegates expect the same result next year but would not agree to British and Australian demands that the committee drop the case.

The action was taken as the U. N. made arrangements for the arrival of a nine-member Chinese Communist delegation from Peiping. The group is expected here Friday and Secretary-General Trygve Lie ordered his chief protocol rep-

8 Divisions Closing Trap On Chinese And Koreans

Capital Division Gains On East; Western Jaw of Big Pincers Is Being Forged

TOKYO, Friday, Nov. 24 (AP).—A 100,000-man United Nations force jumped off today on an "end-the-war" offensive in northwest Korea under the personal direction of General MacArthur.

More than eight Allied divisions—Americans, British Commonwealth soldiers, Turks and South Koreans—began the big winter drive at 8 A.M. (6 P.M., Thursday, EST).

An estimated 100,000 Chinese and Korean Communists had been reported in the area but mysterious Red withdrawals were reported earlier in the week.

The U. N. offensive is aimed to smash ahead to the border of Manchuria at the great Yalu River hydroelectric developments.

General MacArthur, solemn-faced and carrying a brief case, flew from Tokyo to an advanced base in Korea and hurried by jeep toward the front to watch the all-out drive.

He said the massive push should "end the war and restore peace and unity to Korea." It began while unconfirmed rumors suggested a negotiated peace possibly was in the making.

3 Allied Corps in Drive

Reports from United States Eighth Army headquarters in Korea said three Allied corps—two American and one South Korean—took part in the new offensive. They are the United States First and Ninth Corps and the ROK Second Corps.

In the United States First are the Twenty-fourth and First Cavalry Divisions, the Twenty-seventh British Commonwealth Brigade and the ROK First Division.

The United States Ninth has the Twenty-fifth and Second American Divisions.

The ROK Second is composed of the Sixth, Seventh and Eighth South Korean Divisions.

Associated Press Correspondent Leif Erickson reported from Korea that initially the new Eighth Army offensive was expected to roll forward speedily and against scant opposition.

He said Communist forces in the last few days have been withdrawing to defense lines as much as 10 miles north of the foremost United Nations positions while U. N. forces have been building up their power on the northwest front.

Decisive Effort Ahead

A special communique signed by MacArthur said the "United Nations massive compression envelopment in North Korea against the new Red armies operating there is now approaching its decisive effort."

American forces at the Manchurian border in northeast Korea have closed the right jaw of a giant pincers.

"This morning the western sector of the pincer moves forward in general assault in an effort to complete the compression and close

Treasury Raises Interest Rates On 5-Year Notes

By The Associated Press

The Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board apparently have settled a 2-months-old controversy over interest rates paid in refinancing Government debt when it falls due.

The tip-off came Wednesday when the Treasury offered 1¾ percent 5-year notes in exchange for $8,008,101,500 in securities falling due December 15 and January 1. That was a ¼ percent higher rate than was paid on the last 5-year notes issued March 15.

The Treasury and the Reserve Board had been at odds over whether to follow the recent uptrend in interest rates generally. The Treasury had refused to pay higher rates chiefly because this would boost the present $5,750,000,000-a-year carrying charge on the Government debt.

The Reserve Board contended that it was more important to fight inflation by discouraging others from borrowing.

Dear Tony:

I am glad to have your letter and I am glad that the Chicago speech has apparently made a real dent in government thinking in Europe even though it is heartily disliked by some of the "powers that be."

Since you wrote, the general situation seems to have got worse instead of better and there is no question that the German-Italian-Japanese combination is being amazingly successful—bluff, power, accomplishment or whatever it may be.

I appreciate the difficult position of Poland but I hope that the Polish government will not find itself compelled to do things which would be regarded by the democratic nations as yielding to Germany. Meanwhile, all that we can do in every nation to raise the question of what would happen if Fascism were to spread greatly throughout the world and dominate it ought to be said and ought to be done. We cannot stop the spread of Fascism unless world opinion realizes its ultimate dangers.

I am awfully glad to have you and Margaret in Warsaw where you are literally on the firing line—more so in many ways than if you were in Paris or Berlin or Moscow. If things get worse, Warsaw and Prague and Vienna will, one or all, become focal points.

German Cement Imported To Meet District's Shortage

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A continuing shortage of cement has forced several Washington area builders to import supplies from Germany, 4000 miles away, at premium prices, it was learned last night.

The Arlington (Va.) firm of M. T. Broyhill and Sons received 400 bags from Germany six weeks ago and last week began using another 5000 bags on major housing developments in Virginia and in Prince Georges County, Md.

Marvin Broyhill, jr., construction manager, said the cement has been used without difficulty on curbs, gutters, sidewalks, porches, basement floors and steps. Tests are now being made on its suitability for use in walls and other items involving stresses, he added.

The price, however, has been running about 40 percent above that of American cement, Broyhill emphasized.

The builder said cement has been harder to get in the past two months than at any time in the past year. However, American supplies have been improving lately, and indications are that demands will be met fully within 30 to 45 days, he said.

Broyhill said some construction men have been forced into the cement gray market of late as supplies were tied up and the

Rewriting of Creation Story Is Advised by British Bishop

BIRMINGHAM, England, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—The Rt. Rev. Ernest W. Barnes, Bishop of Birmingham, suggested tonight that the early chapters of Genesis dealing with the origin of the world be thrown out of the Bible and "new knowledge" substituted.

In a speech to the clergy of his diocese, the bishop said scientific knowledge of this era was "spreading everywhere, except possibly in the theological colleges of the various churches."

"Difficult though it may be to argue in favor of many Christian beliefs without assuming the infallibility of Biblical statements, we must be ready frankly to accept new knowledge," he said.

Bishop Barnes said that "the early chapters of Genesis dealing with the origin of the world and of man could be set aside without in the least injuring our reverence for Christ's teaching."

He said he recently visited a cave at Lascaux in southwest France and saw colored frescoes of animals of the Ice Age in their furry coats, and proof that primitive man began civilization in western Europe 20,000 years ago.

"In the face of such notice," Dr. Barnes said, "we cannot teach fanciful falsehoods however poetic, literary or symbolic, to children in our church schools. If we wish to win the confidence of our young people we must tell them the new-found truths of the origin of man and of human civilization and these proofs must be combined with their religious education."

'End the War' Drive Begun by MacArthur

the vise," MacArthur's headquarters announced.

"If successful, this should for all practical purposes end the war, restore peace and unity to Korea, enable the prompt withdrawal of United Nations military forces and permit the complete assumption by the Korean people and nation of full sovereignty and international equality."

Softening the enemy for the northwest Allied push, swarms of Allied planes daily have pounded Red concentrations and supply points. The aerial blasts cut sharply into enemy reinforcements and essential supplies.

The northwest border push began just north of the Chongchon River at points roughly 45 to 60 air miles short of the Yalu River separating Korea and Red China's Manchuria.

Recent reports have told of two Red defense lines being built to bar the way to the big Suiho hydroelectric project on the Yalu which feeds the factories and munitions-making plants of Manchuria.

The United Nations forces today returned to the offensive on that front for the first time since late October. Chinese Reds unleashed a savage counterdrive in the last week of October, causing United Nations forces to pull back up to 50 miles after one South Korean element actually had reached the Manchurian border in that sector.

General MacArthur again accented the historic importance of today's development as he has in other stages of the war by going to the scene of action.

The United Nations commander flew to the front twice early in the war when his then slim forces were fighting and falling back toward the small perimeter they established around Pusan.

He was on hand September 15 at Inchon when U.N. amphibious landings opened the gate toward Seoul and caused cut-off Korean Red forces in the south to disintegrate.

He went to Seoul before the last shots were fired there and handed over administration of that ancient capital to President Syngman Rhee of the Korean Republic late in September.

From a plane he personally watched a dramatic drop by paratroopers north of Pyongyang, fallen North Korean capital, in late October and paused in liberated Pyongyang on his way back.

His headquarters in Tokyo said General MacArthur is personally present on the western sector of the battlefront."

Before today, there had been only small scale action on the northeast front and a lull of more than a week in the northwest.

Partly accountable was the winter hazard. Snow covered the roads. Frigid winds and subzero temperatures harassed U. N. forces moving slowly across rugged mountain terrain.

In the northwest recently, there had been mysterious reports of Communist withdrawals.

Peace rumors were touched off by release two days ago of 27 United States prisoners of war and recent Red pullbacks.

Col. M. P. Echols, General MacArthur's information officer, denied there was any peace talk "at this level."

United States Secretary of State Dean Acheson said in Washington Wednesday that the creation of a buffer zone between North Korea and Red China's Manchuria had been discussed with friendly governments but that no agreement had been reached.

This led to speculation that the question of peace in Korea might be discussed at Lake Success with a Chinese Communist delegation en route to the United Nations headquarters.

The freed American prisoners said their captors told them "the Chinese do not want to fight the Americans." The prisoners expressed the view that they were released as a propaganda move. High-ranking American officers in Korea said they were inclined to agree.

The men said they were fed well, treated well and cared for by two captured American doctors. They said their captors did not question them about United Nations troop dispositions.

American authorities wondered if it meant the Peiping government was ready to make concessions.

The answers might lie among these possibilities:

1. The Chinese know they can't protect the Yalu River power plants by ground forces alone. They know that if fullscale war developed, Allied air power could smash the plants in a matter of minutes.

2. The Chinese government may be ready to accept guarantees by President Truman and United Nations officials that the Manchurian frontier will be respected.

3. The Chinese may feel they are in position to bargain.

General MacArthur is reported to have told the U. N. Commission on Korea that the war would be over by the end of this year, with or without the aid given the North Koreans by the Chinese Reds. This could not be confirmed.

resentative, Jehan de Noue, to meet it at Idlewild Airport. Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob A. Malik and a group of Russian bloc delegates are expected to meet the Chinese also.

The U. N. disclosed that it is having some difficulty finding a place for the Chinese Communists to live. Officials suggested the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, but the Chinese were said to have replied they wanted a smaller and more residential type hotel. The U. N. found it difficult to obtain a place in which the delegation could live and have its office also on such short notice.

The United States definitely will not be in the welcoming party. Communist Chinese troops are still shooting at Americans in North Korea, and as long as the state of war exists—although undeclared—the Americans have made it clear they are not on social or talking terms with the Chinese Reds.

T. F. Tsiang, Nationalist Chinese chief delegates, asked the Political Committee to appoint a committee of experts to investigate his charges that the Russians aided the Chinese Communists to power and in so doing committed aggression against China. Tsiang said he had given up hope of material aid but wanted a moral judgment.

The debate showed the committee would not accept Tsiang's plea for an investigating group.

John Foster Dulles, American delegate, also said he found the vote "very satisfactory."

The Political Committee will take up Friday Soviet charges that the United States committed aggression against Formosa by sending the United States Seventh Fleet to Formosan waters. The complaint originally was filed by Communist China but the Russians sponsored it in the U. N. lying on top of me, and I played dead. Then it seemed the whole Communist line ran over me."

The Reds withdrew, however, when the Americans counterattacked. The wounded crawled into a dugout, the sergeant said, but the Chinese got so close that they were tossing grenades into it.

Two days later the sergeant's group surrendered.

"All of us who could stand were lined up against an embankment and a Red captain told us not to be afraid," the sergeant said. "He said they would not hurt us and would take care of us."

The Americans were permitted to keep their cigarettes, watches and other personal possessions.

They were marched to Pyoktong, a village near the Manchurian border. The captives received daily lectures on communism and the ills of capitalism. They got medical care from two American doctors, also prisoners.

Three days ago the Reds selected 27 captives, fed them a good meal of rice, barley meal and vegetables, and loaded them into trucks. They traveled for two nights, hiding during the daylight. The third night the trucks were halted and the Americans were told to walk to their own lines.

With two sergeants and a corporal in the lead, the group started down the road. It was a lonely march. Most of them still feared an ambush.

Then the advance guard saw a cigarette glow in the dark. A voice shouted:

"Halt! Who goes there?"

"God, but I was glad to hear that voice," said the corporal.

John Chang Confirmed as Premier in Korea

SEOUL, Nov. 23 (AP).—President Rhee today appointed four new cabinet members shortly after reaching agreement with the Korean National Assembly on a new premier.

John Chang, Ambassador to the United States, was confirmed as premier on a 148 to 6 vote.

Rhee and the National Assembly had been at odds since the May elections. The assembly once considered asking the cabinet to quit.

Four cabinet members resigned during the past week.

President Rhee said today in a thanksgiving message to the people of the United States that Americans have "many things for which to be thankful.

"In the year 1950 probably the greatest reason is gratitude for the vision and determination to stand firm against the ruthless aggression of communism," he said. "This willingness to accept sacrifices of lives and resources to help others less strong combat this plague, which threatens all who would remain free, is indeed much for which to give thanks."

Rhee said it is the "prayer of Korea that the free peoples of the world take heart from the events of the last few months and dedicate themselves to maintain a world free in body, mind and spirit.

2d Allied Warning

Red Tactics On Austrian Police Hit

For the second time in two weeks, the United States, Britain and France are insisting that the Austrian government be allowed unobstructed control over its own police in the Soviet zone of the country.

American Ambassador Alan Kirk handed a formal note of complaint to acting Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko Wednesday. The dispatch of similar notes was announced by London and Paris. The Russians apparently had ignored an earlier protest, made November 10.

The latest American note said that the Russians have been preventing the Austrian government from maintaining law and order. It demanded that the Soviet government instruct its representatives in Vienna to confirm strictly to the four-power agreements on the occupied land. The note prodded the Russians to take appropriate steps to avoid "a serious deterioration of functioning of the quadripartite machinery in Austria."

The trouble grew out of some Communist-inspired demonstrations October 4, which led to the suspension of a number of Austrian people's chiefs by the Austrian government.

The American note indicated that the Russians were supporting the recalcitrant police chiefs, who have forbidden their subordinates to communicate with the Federal police-president without their consent. The note said the Russian commander, without consulting the other three occupying powers, also ordered the Austrian government to drop criminal proceedings against various Vienna police officers, and forbade disciplining them for their actions.

The note told the Russians that "grave consequences" could result from flouting international agreements.

ECA Chief in Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Economic Cooperation Administrator William C. Foster arrived here today for discussions with Indonesian officials on implementing the American-Indonesian economic agreement signed in Jakarta in October.

STRASBOURG, France, Nov. 23 (AP).—The European Consultative Assembly urged tonight that defense problems be placed within its jurisdiction.

The Assembly adopted, 73 to 7, with 16 abstentions, a series of amendments to the Council of Europe's statute, including provisions for supranational authorities in political, economic and military domains.

German Socialists, who opposed bringing defense matters into the Assembly's jurisdiction, abstained on the final roll call. British Laborites either opposed the amendments or abstained.

The Assembly sidestepped proposals from the independent British Laborite, Ronald Mackay, for setting up a European government and parliament with single-power veto in the upper house. However, a large majority by a show of hands voted for a special seven-member committee to study his project and pass it on to government experts who are to draft statute revisions this winter.

The Assembly turned down, 57 to 39, a move to establish supranational authorities for joint defense and foreign policy—with or without Britain—among groups of member states. The Assembly then turned down a British Laborite move to forbid further discussion of authorities for joint defense.

Instead, the Assembly called on member states to form, on a regional basis, if necessary, authorities for economic, agricultural and industrial matters and for joint defense.

On the issue of whether member states should be encouraged to examine joint defense authorities, the Assembly voted, 72 to 34, with three absentions, to include defense in the list of possible accords.

The nations now negotiating on the Schuman plan for a coal-steel pool were asked to establish a high authority for steel and coal as soon as possible. The Assembly's General Affairs Committee was instructed by a vote of 82 to 9 with 16 abstentions to explore how states which stand aside from pool authorities can be "associated in their activities." British Laborites made the motion. Britain has been standing aside in the Schuman pool negotiations.

Soviet Troops To Move Near Tito's Border

VIENNA, Nov. 23 (AP).—Russian soldiers will soon take up positions along the Hungarian-Yugoslav border, diplomatic sources said today.

The move follows the signing of an agreement this week between the Kremlin and the Hungarian government. It provides for a "large scale" exchange of troops between the two nations.

The sources said six Red Army regiments will be moved into Hungarian posts at Budapest, Miskilcs, Szeged, Nagy-Kanisza, Pecs and Raab. Szeged is right on the Yugoslav border. Pecs and Nagy-Kanisza are only a few miles away.

Six Hungarian regiments will be sent to Russia for training.

This latest step in the war of nerves being waged by the Cominform against Premier Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia follows closely the appointment of Stefan Bartta as chief inspector of the Hungarian army. Bartta was born in Hungary but became a Russian citizen and a major general in the Red Army.

Egypt Bans Student Anti-British Rallies

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 23 (AP).—The government today banned all further student demonstrations "for the purposes of security."

About 10,000 students joined in an anti-British rally yesterday and demanded withdrawal of British troops from the Suez Canal zone and sole Egyptian rule over the Sudan.

Man Gets 6 Years In Israel Red Trial

JERUSALEM, Nov. 23 (AP).—Uri Winter, 23, was sentenced to six years imprisonment today in Israel's first Communist spy trial.

Winter was caught last year with copies of secret military documents about the strength and organization of Israel's army. He got the documents from an army sergeant who recently was court-martialed and sentenced to 10 years imprisonment.

Consulate to Close

MANILA, Nov. 23 (AP). — The Foreign Office said today the Philippine consulate in Shanghai will be closed soon. No reason was given. The consulate is the Philippines last in Red China.

New Red China Outburst Blasts French Actions in Indo-China

HONGKONG, Friday, Nov. 24 (AP)—Red China today accused French troops in Indochina of violating China's territory, both by land and air.

An unidentified foreign office spokesman warned that Chinese Communist troops "have been ordered to defend their border" and that France would "be held responsible" for past and future violations.

The spokesman, in a statement broadcast by the Peiping Red radio, further accused French troops of "bloody atrocities" and "shameless, barbaric behavior."

The long statement, broadcast in Chinese, was still being translated. It was not immediately apparent whether Peiping was charging the French with atrocities against Chinese in Red China or against Indochinese.

This extension of Red China's intensive antiforeign campaign is the first specific antiFrench action since last year, when French government property in Tsingtao was seized. However, the official New China news agency has carried extensive articles repeating broadcasts made by rebel leader Ho Chi Minh's radio.

Indochina Communists Hit Post Near Moncay

SAIGON, Vietnam, Indochina, Nov. 23 (AP).—Communist-led Viet Minh rebels were reported violently attacking a French post 15 miles west of the coastal frontier fortress of Moncay tonight.

A French military spokesman anounced warplanes based at Hanoi, a provincial capital 150 miles southwest of Moncay, strafed and bombed the raiders in support of the garrison at the post, Ten Mai.

French headquarters said another minor French post only nine miles from Moncay also had been attacked, but the rebels were repulsed and the engagement broken off.

These assaults marked the first Viet Minh drives in the area of Moncay—the coastal anchor of the northern French defense lines—in more than a week.

Facts given correspondents at tonight's military briefing session provided no solid indication that the upsurge in activity by the rebels, the troops of Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh, heralded any major offensive.

60 Greek Children To Be Repatriated

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Sixty Greek children now in Yugoslavia will be repatriated Saturday, the International Red Cross announced tonight.

The group will be the first of several thousand whom the Red Cross hopes to return to Greece from Yugoslavia and other Balkan countries.

Credit Curbs Seen Cutting Price Rises

Excess Profit Bill Up Today For Writing

The House Ways and Means Committee starts work today on an excess profits tax bill which is certain to stir up a storm of Republican protest.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) ordered the committee to go to work on the bill after a week of hearings in which businessmen almost solidly opposed the idea.

The final bill presumably will be pretty much in line with President Truman's request for a 75 percent excess profits levy dating back to July 1, to "capture" the Korean war earnings.

Businessmen contend such a tax will only feed the inflationary fires by encouraging industry to make nonessential expenditures in the knowledge that taxes would take the money anyway. They proposted, instead, an increase in the regular corporation tax rate.

They believe a straight increase might raise even more than the 4 billion dollars outlined by Mr. Truman as his goal.

The first test on the tax bill will come long before it is drafted. However, Representative Daniel A. Reed (R., N. Y.), said he will ask the House as soon as it returns Monday to permit consolidation of a regular corporation tax boost.

The Democrats, who beat down several GOP drives to broaden the hearings to include other forms of corporation taxes, contend Congress limited them to consideration of excess profits in raising individual income taxes last September.

The Federal Reserve Board said last night credit curbs have slowed down buying on the installment plan and have helped check price increases.

Claiming "substantial" results for the tightened controls put into effect October 16 after a one-month trial of milder curbs, the boards November "Bulletin" asserted:

"Demand for many types of consumer durable goods, which in the summer was far in excess of supply, has declined and can now be satisfied in more competitive markets.

"Prices of used automobiles, which were very high in the summer, have fallen to levels more nearly normal in relation to list prices of new cars."

The board acknowledged that preliminary reports from "trade sources and banks" indicate the total volume of instalment debt has continued to rise — despite controls—from the $13,329,000,000 peak hit at the end of September.

Braking Effect Apparent

But it said a braking effect from the controls already is apparent, on the basis of "tentative estimates."

The estimates, it said, "indicate that the volume of instalment credit extended in October and thus far in November was smaller, and that credit outstanding increased less than in the preceding months or in the same period of 1949."

The controls apply only to autos, furniture, television sets and about 15 other major appliances, but the board said they "may also affect the demand for nondurable consumer goods" — which takes in items ranging from clothing to whisky.

"Persons who meet the stricter credit terms will have less cash initially to spend on other goods," it said.

"On the other hand, to the extent that potential purchasers are discouraged from buying durable goods, their demand for nondurable goods may expand. . . .

"To the extent that stricter terms dampen the expansion of total consumer purchasing power, there is likely to be a dampening of consumer demand for nondurable goods as well as for durable goods."

Down Payments Required

The control terms since October 16 have required down payments of one-third on autos, 25 percent on appliances, and 15 percent on furniture and rugs. They also require full payment in 15 months.

The board, mindful of opposition its terms have aroused among auto dealers and others, offered a defense.

"In present circumstances of capacity output and growing defense requirements, liberal consumer credit can stimulate demand but without a compensating increase in the supply of goods." It said.

"Further monetary expansion at this time can provide the financial base for supporting higher price levels and encouraging additional price advances; it cannot, however, foster additional supplies of goods."

NPA Curbs Hurting Industry, Wilson Says

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—Charles E. Wilson, president of the General Electric Corp., says the National Production Authority regulations are hurting industry.

Wilson made the statement last night in an address before a group of Richmond business men and manufacturers. He declared that copper, aluminum and cobalt, the use of which has been curtailed recently, are vital to industry.

State Department Honors Post Cartoonist

By Arthur Ellis-The Washington Post

THE PEN IS MIGHTIER—At department ceremony (from left) Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post; Edward W. Barrett, Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs; Cartoonist Herblock (Herbert Block), and Miss Mary Richardson go into a huddle over the artist's pamphlet of anti-Communist cartoons, which have won him national renown

Herblock, Pulitzer prize-winning cartoonist of The Washington Post, has been chosen to lead a new salient in the State Department's "war of words" overseas.

Sixty thousand reprints of a pamphlet of 30 Herblock anti-Communist cartoons are now being shipped to 80 countries, the department disclosed yesterday.

It marks the first time the works of any cartoonist have been thus collected by the State Department for use in combating Communist lies.

The pamphlet, entitled "Herblock Looks at Communism," will go to all major countries and to such out-of-the-way places as Kuala Lumpur in the Malay Federated States, Accra on the African Gold Coast and Kabul in Afghanistan.

Typical cartoon is the one showing a couple of North Koreans camouflaging their tank and the caption: "Hand Me Some More of Those Olive Branches." Beneath is printed the line that inspired the cartoon: "The North Korean puppet regime termed their unprovoked aggression against the republic the road to 'peace' and 'unity' in Korea."

The idea for the pamphlet began with Mary Richardson, member of the Library of Congress' staff and an admirer of Herblock's cartoons, who thought they could be put to use in fighting Communist propaganda. She so wrote Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Post.

Graham sent the letter along to Edward W. Barrett, Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, who immediately seconded Miss Richardson's idea. The Post printed the first 10,000 of the pamphlets and the State Department the other 50,000.

Herbert L. Block, (Herblock), Barrett, Miss Richardson and Graham were on hand yesterday at the State Department for a ceremony marking realization of the idea.

The State Department for some time has been using the works of Herblook and other cartoonists in its "battle for truth" against the Soviets. But this is the first time cartoons have been collected in pamphlet form.

Actually, the pamphlet should eventually reach a circulation much greater than the initial 60,000.

The number is being sent to a hundred American missions overseas. The pamphlet, being printed in offset, it will be possible in many of these places to substitute the native language for the English-language caption and then reprint the pamphlet.

Chamber Urges Unified Foreign Aid Program

By The Associated Press

The United States Chamber of Commerce urged last night that future aid to foreign nations be wrapped up in a single, unified program to save money and assure the best possible contribution to common defenses against communism.

The single program, the Chamber's statement said, "should be applicable on a flexible basis to any part of the world as circumstances may require." It also should be carried out according to definite congressional "prescriptions as to purpose, policies and methods."

The Chamber took the position that at present foreign aid is not sufficiently unified. For example, it said, that there are two programs for helping develop foreign nations by means of American technical know-how.

Points to "Point 4" Plan

One, it said, is the "Point Four" program enacted by Congress last August. In addition, the chamber continued, the Economic Cooperation Administration is carrying out similar programs much larger in scope and without the restrictions written by Congress into the "Point Four" legislation.

It said ECA aid to Southeastern Asia is of the "Point Four" type:

"ECA funds are being employed there primarily for internal purposes, such as public health and sanitation, education nad improvement of agricultural methods, and to a lesser extent for outside procurement on the pattern of ECA aid to European countries.

"ECA aid to Europe was largely designed to help those dollar-short countries buy the outside goods they needed to tide them over the war's aftermath and get their economies running again."

Concerning assistance to Western Europe, the Chamber held that a large cut is now in order. It said:

Europe Now on Its Feet

"A continuation of ECA aid on its present pattern and scale cannot be justified in the light of the extent of the economic recovery of western Europe. It is clear that the economic rehabilitation of western Europe is virtually complete.

"Nevertheless a continuation of limited aid to Europe on some basis and on some scale may possibly be justified."

It said future aid should keep in mind the economic objectivs of U. S. foreign policy. Among these it mentioned "the elimination of discriminatory trade practices aimed at U. S. products and the restoration of free convertibility currencies."

The statement was prepared by the Chamber's foreign commerce committee headed by Richard L. Bowditch, president, C. H. Sprague & Son Co., Boston.

Data On A-Reactors Will Be Made Public

tails on construction, design and operation of six low-power reactors—i.e. atomic "furnaces" that do not produce appreciable quantities of plutonium, the A-bomb explosive.

Four Made in U. S.

Four were made in the United States: the world's first, using a graphite moderator, built under the stadium stands at Stagg Field at the University of Chicago; a rebuilt modification of the same reactor; a uranium and heavy water reactor, and a "homogenous" enriched uranium, light water reactor at Los Alamos.

The other two are the British "Gleep," a uranium and graphite reactor at Harwell, England, and the Canadian "Zeep," a uranium and heavy water reactor at Chalk River, Ontario.

It appeared to a layman's analysis that the forthcoming information might well constitute the largest body of technical information on atomic energy to be made public since the original, famous, Smyth Report on the whole wartime atomic project.

Initial fruits of the new declassification policy came yesterday with the issuance by the AEC of the first layman's descriptions of the four American reactors. Of little value to a scientist, they nevertheless give the average citizen the first picture, in words and photographs, of what these machines are that have tapped the internal energy of the center of the atom.

Stagg Field One Started It

The Stagg Field reactor was the one in which, on December 2, 1942, man achieved the first self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction. That is, once it was started by an outside neutron — a cosmic ray could do it — and that neutron hit the nucleus or center of an uranium-235 atom, the resulting split released more neutrons, splitting more atoms, and the system was at work.

The device, and its rebuilt successor, were something like a pile of blocks made by a giant's child.

The blocks were of graphite—the form of the carbon in your "lead" pencil, but of extreme chemical purity. They were about like 4x4 beams 16 inches long, and were piled up alongside each other.

Shield of Lead and Concrete

By the time this inner cube was surrounded with a shield of lead and 5-foot concrete walls (to stop dangerous radiations of neutrons and gamma rays from emerging), the resulting structure was 30 feet wide, 32 feet long and 21 feet high—a large, windowless two-story concrete structure.

The fuel, pure uranium and uranium oxide of great chemical purity, was contained in small cylinders of 2½ inches diameter and weighing 6 pounds. These were imbedded in the graphite blocks in a lattice pattern. In all, there were 3200 lumps of uranium metal, weighing 10 tons, and 14,500 lumps of the uranium oxide, weighing about 40 tons.

Of all the uranium, only one part in 140 was U-235, the fissionable variety. For the most part, it is only these, when properly hit by a neutron "bullet" (a tiny particle in the center of an atom) that will split, and thus release some extra neutrons to go on splitting other U-235 atoms.

The neutrons have much more likelihood of splitting the atom's nucleus if they are traveling at "thermal" speeds — about 4000 miles an hour. But since they emerge from a fissioning atom at a speed 10,000 times as fast, they must be slowed down.

Moderator Slows Them Down

Hence the moderator, whose role is to slow the neutrons down. The idea is to build a system in which the neutrons will hit as many possible other atoms of light weight before they hit another U-235 atom.

Graphite was used because it is of relative light atomic weight, and does not itself tend in large degree to absorb the neutrons. Instead, when a neutron hits the carbon atom, it bounces back at a reduced speed.

Hence the lattice structure. A neutron from a fissioning U-235 atom bounced, or had collisions, about 110 times inside the graphite moderator—like a drunk in a forest bouncing off one tree after another—until, at slower speed, it hit another U-235 atom and split it.

But when one neutron hits U- But when one neutron hits a U- three other neutron bullets are released. If they all found other U-235 targets and split them, the power of the reaction would multiply so fast—in a tiny fraction of a second—that the whole works would explode. (This is just what happens in an A-bomb.)

So, to keep the reaction controlled, the Stagg Field reactor had inserted in it cadmium rods, to absorb some of the superabundant neutrons. The deeper the rods are inserted in the system, the more neutrons are absorbed. These control rods, then, were inserted just far enough to keep the chain reaction going at a steady rate, instead of increasing, and at a low power level.

In this reactor, such heat as was created was dissipated naturally through the surface.

In the heavy water reactor, at the Argonne National Laboratory, the moderator was not the carbon atoms, but those of deuterium, the heavy form of hydrogen that, with oxygen, constitutes heavy water.

Here there was an aluminum tank, 6 feet in diameter and almost 11 feet high, filled with about 6½ tons of heavy water.

Into this was suspended 120 uranium rods, of the pure metal, about 1 inch in diameter and 6 feet long "latticed" in the sense that they were 5 inches apart. They weighed nearly three tons.

There was a layer of 2 feet of graphite around the tank, to reflect flying neutrons back into the center of the apparatus. And around the whole thing there was a 4-inch thick shield of lead-cadmium alloy and an 8-foot thick concrete second shield to absorb such neutrons and dangerous radiation as came out of the reactor. There was also a cooling system.

In this reactor, the neutrons emerging from splitting U-235 atoms bounced against the atoms of deuterium and were thus slowed down to the right speed so when they hit another U-235 nucleus in one or another of the neighboring rods, they split it.

Water Boiler Type Reactor

The final type of reactor, at the Los Alamos atomic laboratory, was known as a water boiler type. There were two, one of low power ("LOPO") and one of somewhat higher power ("HYPO").

Compared with the huge jobs previously described, this was a small affair. Its core was a sphere smaller in size than a library globe of the world.

It was filled with a "homogenous" substance—the fissionable uranium and the moderator mixed together in a liquid. This was a solution of uranyl nitrate in water. The actual uranium in the system weighed less than two pounds.

But here the uranium was enriched. Instead of one part of the fissionable U-235 to 139 parts of the more stable U-238, as found in nature, there was a ratio of one to six.

That meant a much greater concentration of the fissionable, neutron-ejecting fuel. The moderator was simply the nitrogen, oxygen and hydrogen atoms in the water and nitrate solution, what the scientists called the "Soup."

Surropnding the one-foot sphere in which the mixture was contained was a reflector of beryllium oxide, a shell of graphite, a shield of four inches of lead, one-thirty-second of an inch of cadmium and five feet of concrete.

In all of these reactors, there were the cadmium control rods, to absorb excess neutrons and keep the system operating at the desired steady, non-explosive rate.

And in all of them were various kinds of devices—tubes—in which other materials could be inserted to be irradiated by the flying neutrons. The other materials inserted absorb neutrons and are converted to isotopes—variants of the basic element—which thus become more or less radio-active.

These are the wondrous "tracers" used for experimental work. They are elements of any kind, reacting chemically like any other such elements, but betraying their actions and positions to a Geiger counter and thus revealing what happens inside any organism, living or dead.

Some of the insertion devices were tricky in the extreme. For instance, in the heavy water tank there was a pneumatic tube, called the "rabbit." Certain materials, whose radioactivity remains only a very short time—a matter of seconds—could be shot into the core of the reactor in the tube by helium under pressure, and shot out again in rapid order.

Nuclear Chain Reaction System . . .

ARTIST'S SKETCH of the Stagg Field graphite-moderated nuclear reactor, the first system ever to effect a nuclear chain reaction. Reactor consists of a cube-shaped pile of graphite into which lumps of uranium have been imbedded in accordance with a predetermined lattice-type arrangement. A concrete shield, 5 feet thick, surrounds the reactor core. Control and safety rods enter the sides of the reactor from platforms. Numerous openings are available so that blocks of graphite (stringers) may be removed and test materials and uranium inserted into the reactor's active area. In order to reflect neutrons back into the reactor core, the uranium-bearing section is surrounded by a graphite layer known as a "reflector"

Hickenlooper Approves Easing of AEC Secrecy

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) yesterday gave his qualified indorsement to the plan for easing some of the secrecy provisions, and also indicated he would support a request for additional AEC funds.

Hickenlooper, the ranking Republican member of the Senate-House Atomic Committee and its former chairman, has been critical of AEC's spending and security policies in the past.

Rep. Arends Raps 'Hit and Miss' Reserve Policy

By the United Press

A top House Republican leader accused the Armed Services yesterday of having a "hit and miss" reserve policy and demanded a fresh Congressional investigation.

He said the services should try to get more men through the draft.

Representative Leslie C. Arends (R., Ill.), minority House whip and a top-ranking member of the House Armed Services Committee, said lack of an overall policy on calling up reserves has worked "great hardship" on many young men.

His call for a manpower study by the Armed Services Committee came as committee staffers put finishing touches on a report on just such a study, conducted in September by a subcommittee headed by Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.).

"That wasn't enough," Arends said. "I wasn't here, and most of the other members of the committee were not here. And we're all getting a flood of protests from our constitutents."

Arends said he would ask Vinson at the short session of Congress starting Monday to get the new study underway at once. Vinson was not available for comment but there was at least a chance he would agree.

Committee sources said House and Senate members have been beseiged with complaints, mostly from reservists with long World War II service who were called back to uniform just as they were getting resettled in homes and businesses.

"Orders to active duty are being issued on a more or less hit-and-miss basis, without regard to the present status of the veteran and sometimes without regard to his comparative value . . ." Arends said. "This has resulted in many cases of great hardship."

He said the committee should develop a "sound and equitable program" for calling reserves and should see what can be don about filling more spots with draftees, by cutting down the rate of rejections.

Vinson went over this ground at the earlier hearings with top Pentagon and Selective Service officials. Spokesmen for the Army, Navy and Air Force said the Korean war emergency forced fast call up that resulted in some hardships. They promised reforms, and worked out a point system supposed to give all reservists an equal break.

The point system subsequently was junked because of extra manpower demands stemming from setbacks in Korea.

The subcommittee's report still must be approved by all members and won't be made public until next week. It is expected to recommend further reforms in the calling of reserves and to suggest changes in the draft.

In addition to the fresh study requested by Arends, a Senate Armed Services subcommittee headed by Senator Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.), has announced it will investigate the military manpower problem. This study probably won't start until early next year.

Mrs. Clemson, at 102, Marks Thanksgiving in Old Home

MRS. MARY ELIZABETH CLEMSON
. . . thankful for her 102d birthday

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

CLEMSONVILLE, Md., Nov. 23 (Spl.).—Back in 1775, when America was quiet, newly-touched land and its English colonists were still pledged to the mother country, a family named Clemson built a house on the rolling hills near here, about 20 miles northeast of Frederick.

During the years, the Clemsons celebrated their Thanksgivings, their Christmases and birthdays there. The family grew and prospered there.

Today, another Thanksgiving was celebrated at the Clemson house. And its chief celebrant was Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Clemson, who had a special reason to be thankful. Today is her 102d birthday.

Gathered with Mrs. Clemson for the traditional turkey dinner were four of the eight children she bore to Nicholas H. Clemson, who died in 1933 at the age of 85. The other four children are dead.

A Quiet Day

It was, in all, a quiet day for Mrs. Clemson. For the first time, she begged off from the informal open house she customarily holds for her neighbors on her birthday. Still alert and active, Mrs. Clemson said she didn't feel "quite equal" to too much company.

What a span of years, of history. She was only 13 when the Civil War started. Her father, James H. Cramer, had established the family home at Woodsboro, Md. He was a strong Southern sympathizer. The forays of Union troops on his property infuriated him. They used his place as a camp site, confiscated most of his livestock, poultry and crops.

To Mary Elizabeth it was an exciting time. She met a general—a Southern general. He was Gen. Jubal A. Early, who camped at her father's home before going to the battle of Gettysburg.

Oldest Living Hood Girl

Mary Elizabeth was a student at the Frederick Female Seminary (now Hood College). She remembers how the Southern girls wept when General Robert E. Lee surrendered at Appomattox. Now, Hood College remembers her as its oldest living alumna.

And at last the war was over. Mary Elizabeth Cramer was a belle of Frederick County. She liked to go to the social gatherings that the life of those times afforded. And it was at one of these that she first became attracted to Nicholas Clemson. It was a jousting match, with "knights" tilting at rings. Mary Elizabeth liked the way Nicholas rode his mount. She liked Nicholas. Later, she met him, and on January 24, 1872, they were married.

Since then, Mrs. Clemson has lived on the Clemson estate, near the town of Clemsonville—a garage, a grocery store and a few houses—which was named after the family.

With her constantly is a daughter, Miss Bessie Clemson. With her also today were her sons, Charles, a Westminster attorney; Walter, a Harmony Grove farmer, and Claude, a farmer near Frederick.

More than a century of living have not dimmed Mrs. Clemson's appreciation of the virtue of the new . . . she thinks ladies' fashions today are very good, but beach wear is "entirely too scanty." She believes in temperance for herself, but has no objection to serving a "bit of cheer" for her friends. And she likes to eat. And she opposes "slim breakfasts" strongly.

For the past twenty years Mrs. Clemson has led a rather retiring life. She still takes an occasional automobile ride. She hasn't changed a lifelong habit of voting the Democratic ticket.

Happy birthday, Mrs. Clemson!

Pan-American Mass Draws Great Throng

Thanks to God for shielding the Western Hemisphere from the "insatiable grasp" of communism were offered at the forty-first annual Pan-American mass here yesterday.

An overflow crowd attended the Thanksgiving Day event at St. Patrick's Catholic Church, 10th and G sts. nw.

The Rev. John Tracy Ellis, Catholic University history professor, detailed the impact of communism on the Western World in the sermon, declaring "Christian morality" as "the best antidote to the atheistic ideology."

"It is with a profound sense of gratitude to God for shielding us from the cruel fate which has overtaken our brothers in Asia and Europe that we gather here today," the educator said.

"Up to this hour the Western Hemisphere has been spared the worst features of the evil system which has fastened itself upon so large a part of the world," Dr. Ellis declared.

"For that we can and do give thanks in unison today to God, and in our act of thanksgiving we join especially with our brothers in Brazil who have instituted a Thanksgiving day religious service to coincide with that celebrated here in our own country.

"Our present combat is not against an idea which admits of compromise, as we learned of our bitter sorrow after Yalta and Tehran.

"We know too well the fate of Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Lithuania to need further warning that here, indeed, is evil in the starkest form, here is the triumph of what St. Peter called the world-rulers of this darkness, here is the harbinger of a new barbaric age."

Latin-American diplomats and church dignitaries joined members of the judiciary, Congress and official Washington in the service, one of the best known in the Nation.

They heard Dr. Ellis close his sermon with a 2000-year-old prayer dedicated to the welfare of President Truman and the Presidents of the 21 Latin-American republics.

It asked God to grant to temporal leaders "health, peace, concord and firmness" in the exercise of their duties.

The Most Rev. Amleto G. Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, presided at the mass, which was celebrated by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington.

Seated in the sanctuary were the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Washington and rector of Catholic University; the Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore, and the Most Rev. Arsene Turquetil, titular bishop of Ptolemias, Asia Minor.

A special musical program was sung during the mass by the church choir, under the direction of Salvatore Lupica. At the conclusion of the services, the official representatives were guests of Archbishop O'Boyle at a luncheon at his residence adjoining St. Patrick's.

Officers of the mass were the Rev. Leo J. Coadym deacon; the Rev. Thomas W. Lyons, subdeacon; the Rev. Bernard E. Ransing, archpriest, and the Rev. John P. McCormick and the Rev. Francis Connell, deacons of honor.

Dictionary In Chinese D. C. Product

A dictionary with 8000 characters that will aid Cantonese Chinese to learn Mandarin has just been published by the Rev. V. A. Wong Yuen Sang, Chinese pastor at St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Fr. Wong

It is printed on two large sheets of newspaper and folds up into a 4-by-12-inch brown paper cover. The Library of Congress, which granted Father Wong a copyright on his dictionary, said it is the first Chinese "book," as far as present employes can recall, to be published in Washington.

Father Wong, who is 30, speaks about 100 Chinese dialects and has compiled a much larger dictionary than that just published. The larger book is more than 70,000 words in alphabetical order, an innovation for Chinese word finders.

Discussing his new book, Father Wong said it is important for all Chinese to know the Madarin dialect, since it is the "first class" language of China.

Father Wong expects his new dictionary to be used in Washington's Chinatown, where he is Catholic chaplain and unofficial representative of his church.

Atlanta Paper Revising Concept Of Society Page

ATLANTA, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Atlanta Constitution is throwing out its society and women's pages this week. Instead there'll be a new department, not only for women, but men and children, too—the whole family.

Editor Ralph McGill said the new pages, to be called the home and family department, will be "a new concept in handling what for years in the newspaper business has been called society and women's news."

"We think this should be a department for men, women and children," he said.

"It will deal with problems of all three and with expert advice under the direction of a trained home economist."

Society news will still be carried by the Constitution. But, said Managing Editor Lee Rogers, it will be tailored for the new department. For instance, a reporter writing about a party will look for and point up ideas that someone else giving a party might want to use.

There'll be stories on menu planning, home decorating, etc., also stories on how to plant a garden and do your own house painting. Other features will be slanted for children.

Fire Damages Quartermaster Depot Cafeteria

Four area fire companies yesterday fought a blaze in an unoccupied cafeteria at the Washington Quartermaster Depot on Duke st. near Alexandria, damaging tables, chairs and food-serving equipment.

The fire, which began near the serving counter shortly before 1 p. m., was under control within 30 minutes. No damage estimate was available.

Companies from Bailey's Crossroads, Franconia and Alexandria, in addition to the depot's own fire company, fought the blaze, which was confined to the area near the counter. Firemen said some equipment in the adjacent kitchen was damaged by smoke and water.

Wounded Brentwood Youth Is Improved

The condition of 17-year-old James Carroll Reeves, who was found shot with a .22 bullet after being chided for poor report cards Wednesday night, was reported much improved yesterday at Prince Georges General Hospital, Cheverly, Md.

The youth was found in his room at the family home, 3703 Tilden st., Brentwood, by a younger brother. The bullet entered his stomach. He is the son of the chief of the Brentwood Rescue Squad.

Pan-American Mass Procession

By William Klemm-The Washington Post

OVERFLOW CROWD—Thanks to God for shielding the Americas from the "insatiable grasp" of communism were offered yesterday at the forty-first annual Pan-American Mass at St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw. The Rev. John Tracy Ellis, Catholic University history professor, delivered the sermon. The mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, shown here in the procession as he passes St. John's cadets

Thousands Give Thanks in Area Churches

Thousands of Washingtonians joined Americans the world over yesterday in giving thanks for their bountiful land.

Area churches — almost without exception—reported standing room only. Congregations, many meeting jointly, heard prayers ranging from warnings against existing in a world "half stuffed and half starved" to calls for "a reexamination of our democratic principles."

Four Christian churches and one Hebrew congregation joined in a holiday observance at the First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., in which thanksgiving was described as "a luxury not to be indulged in only on special occasions."

"Necessary Ingredient"

The Rev. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church and president of the Washington Federation of Churches, declared giving thanks is "a necessary ingredient of life itself if it is to have spiritual dimensions."

"Some of us might find it difficult to give thanks this year because our boys are fighting in Korea," Dr. Cranford said.

"But difficulties can be blessings in disguise if we accept them in the right spirit.

"Even the threat of communism, if accepted as a challenge, can cause us to reexamine our democratic principles and reaffirm our dedication to them."

Georgetown Churches Join

The five congregations sharing in the service were National City Church, Washington Hebrew Congregations, Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Calvary Baptist and First Congregational.

Eight Georgetown churches united for a service at the Dumbarton Avenue Methodist Church.

The Rev. Russell C. Stroup warned against a "Thanksgiving of hypocrisy in which we as individuals or a Nation thank God we are not as other men.

"We can't exist in a world half stuffed and half starved any more than we can live in a world half slave and half free," the minister of the Georgetown Presbyterian Church asserted.

North Capitol St. Service

Joining in the event were Christ Episcopal Church, Georgetown Lutheran Church, Grace Episcopal Church, St. John's Episcopal Church, St. Luke's Methodist Church, West Washington Baptist Church, in addition to Georgetown Presbyterian and the Dumbarton Church.

Churches of the North Capitol st. and Rhode Island ave. area joined congregations to hear the Rev. M. P. German, pastor of Bethany Baptist, at the Eckington Presbyterian Church.

Quoting Cicero, the minister called gratitude "not only one of the finest of virtues but the mother of them all," and added that the man "who had a grateful heart has almost everything, while he who does not has almost nothing."

Hilltop Community Service

Congregations of the Memorial Evangelical United Brethren Church and the Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church also attended the service.

Residents of the Hilltop area in Southeast Washington held their seventh annual community service this year in the East Washington Heights Baptist Church.

'Drawstring' on Heart Lets Surgeon Probe at Leisure

CHICAGO, Nov. 23 (AP).—An operation which opens the heart like a drawstring purse, permitting surgeons to probe inside leisurely and without danger of hemorrhage, was described today.

Dr. Samuel A. Thompson of New York City said in the Journal of the American Medical Association that the operation has been used successfully on dogs and on two human patients.

Here is how it works:

A hollow piece of tissue called the auricular appendage hangs like a dog's ear on the outside of the upper cavity of all hearts. It serves as a small secondary chamber of the heart.

Near the tip of this dog ear, the surgeon sews stitches in and out like purse string on a woman's drawstring purse. Then he sews the same kind of stitches at the base of the appendage. This permits the appendage to be drawn tight or loosened at its tip and also at its base.

Then the base purse string is drawn tight and the tip of the appendage is cut off. The only blood lost is the small amount in the dog's ear. The surgeon probes his finger or instrument to the base purse string. Then the tip purse string is drawn tight around the probing finger and the base purse string opened. The surgeon's finger or instrument plugs the tip outlet preventing blood from escaping. The thin and pliable tissues of the appendage permit freedom of movement deep into the heart.

Dr. Thompson said the tissue grows together easily at the severed tip.

Cement Here From Abroad

winter shutdown on building loomed.

Metler said builders reported the cement was as good quality as the American product and tended to stay harder.

He said a German cement syndicate sent a salesman through the country recently offering as much as a half-million bags of cement for sale.

The Commerce Department yesterday reported a tremendous upsurge in German cement sales in the United States. In July, none were reported; in August, it went to 11,500 tons, and in September, the last month for which figures are available, to 44,500 tons.

The American cement shortage has been largely attributed to lengthy plant strikes and a heavy increase in highway construction in several states.

Judge Ends Segregation

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 23 (AP).—A Federal district court judge here has ordered an end to segregation of Spanish-American students in the Tolleson, Ariz., public schools.

The memorandum handed down by Judge Dave W. Ling called the practice discriminatory and by direct implication a violation of civil rights.

It was not known if the ruling will abolish segregation of Spanish-American students in other school districts of the State where it is practiced. Not all districts have segregation.

Gregg Garcia, attorney for the complaining Tolleson residents and president of Alianza Hispani Americano, fraternal benefit society, said in his opinion the ruling would abolish segregation of all types.

Voters of Arizona turned down an antisegreation law proposed in the general election.

To Women With Nagging Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

Symington and Chapman Speakers at CIO Convention

CHICAGO, Nov. 23 (AP).—Two top Government officials said today that industrial expansion holds the key to a sound war time economy.

The two—Chairman W. Stuart Symington of the National Security Resources Board and Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman—addressed the national CIO convention.

Symington said "the struggle for manganese" needed to make steel from low grade iron ore typified the strategic materials problem.

Chapman charged that "faint hearted apostles of a scarcity economy" were "endangering the country's future."

Much of Symington's brief speech was devoted to meeting a complaint that has threaded throughout the CIO convention—that labor has not been given enough influence in America's mobilization program. He emphasized labor's representation on the mobilization advisory board.

"Gray Mobilization" Difficult

Symington said Government officials have found it "more difficult to operate what might be called a 'gray' mobilization than an all-out mobilization."

Chapman said the steel shortage "is the result of the short-sighted policies of a few men who, lacking confidence in the future of America, have refused to expand steel facilities at the pace our economic growth demands.

"We cannot permit our growth as a Nation to be stunted, and our security as a people jeopardized, by the faint-hearted apostles of a scarcity economy," the Interior Secretary declared. "By trying to play it safe, these men are endangering the country's future."

Chapman said the Nation needs more sources for iron ore, manganese, and oil and an expansion of public power projects.

He said the taxpayers should bear the most of the cost of expanding production facilities which have "only short-term usefulness" but not those which have long-term earning power.

America's annual output of goods and services should, by "conservative" estimate, be expanded from 280 billion dollars now to 350 billion dollars by 1955—about one-third of the increase during World War II, Chapman said.

This, he added, would "amply support any defense effort now in contemplation, provide the needed expansion of industrial capacity and still enable us to maintain our high standard of living."

Without a dissenting vote, the convention rejected an appeal for reinstatement from the Marine Cooks and Stewards, one of 11 unions kicked out of the CIO on charges that they were Communist dominated.

This union, claiming to represent 10,000 workers on the West Coast, was expelled along with eight others by the CIO executive board after last year's convention ousted two others. None of the others appealed.

The appeal arrived too late to meet the required 10-day preconvention notice but the appeals commitee agreed to present the matter to the convention anyway.

Congratulate the state of Israel "upon its splendid progress despite adversity," and pledged the CIO's "continued moral and material support so that Israel may enjoy uninterrupted growth [illegible] ing peace and international fellowship."

For Farm Price Supports

The convention adopted a resolution favoring farm price supports but said ways must be found to "provide security of income to farmers without the necessity of destroying or wasting food."

It also approved President Murray's proposal for working unity with the AFL, United Mine Workers, the railroad brotherhoods and the International Association of Machinists. Murray said unity talks with these groups have been "reasonably successful" and "the atmosphere has been friendly."

Other adopted resolutions:

Renewed the CIO's demand that the Atomic Energy Commission discontinue its practice of contracting out its work to private companies. This resolution also called on President Truman and the AEC to "make fuller disclosures in plain language of facts within the limits of national security about the development and peaceful uses of atomic energy in the scientific and industrial fields."

For Latin-American Progress

Reaffirmed the CIO-s intent to "push its plan for the economic and social progress of Latin America before the appropriate authorities." The resolution demanded the "immediate reinstatement of free and democratic government" in Argentina, Peru, Venezuela, the Dominican republic, Colombia, Panama and Haiti.

Supported the Puerto Rican people "in their efforts to progress through democratic means toward the self-determined goal." It assailed the attempted assassination of President Truman and Puerto Rican Governor Munez Marin as "the reckless madness of a handful of political maniacs."

Urged a review of the Puerto Rican Sugar Act of 1948.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THERE'S a first rate recording personality with a first rate orchestra at the Mayflower Lounge. Clark Dennis is the singer, known for his many hits on Capitol records. Bob Grant's orchestra does the admirable supporting work; he's a favorite of Hildegarde and Edith Piaf in that all important position.

Clark Dennis, probably in his thirties, has a voice that would sound perfect on a record or over the radio. His natural talent and training are unquestionably of the best.

And in interpretations, too, Dennis is well trained. From a love song, where he clasps his hands in picturesque agony, he'll pause a moment, gather his forces, and presto! He's an amused young man singing a sophisticated song. Or it may be an Irish favorite, and quick as a flash our Dennis is an Irishman; whatever the mood, he has it and projects it.

Bob Grant's music is excellent—which he'll brush aside with, "Oh, well, you know. That is my line, backing up singers."

Several years ago he worked with Edith Piaf at the Marseilles and liked her and admired her work so much he hated to leave. "Just a plain person," he says, "and as sweet as they come." But the Hilton chain offered him a job at the Plaza, and it couldn't be ignored. This summer he left the chain on an urgent call from Hildegarde's manager, to help out on a mammoth barnstorming venture.

Grant couldn't ignore his old associates and went, but the Hilton chain, not to be outdone, offered him a bandstand at the Waldorf if he'd leave Hildegarde for the Mayflower meanwhile. That's how things go in show business, but only if the band is one of the best.

His dance music is mainly "society," or "businessman's bounce," with special laurels for a good vocalist. At showtime, though, he brings all the versatility of several orchestras into his seven-piece group.

Boy, 14, Finds Fossil Bones Of Big Sloth

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23 (AP)—A 14-year-old boy who prefers hunting fossils to playing baseball has found the bones of a huge animal that roamed South Jersey 100,000 years ago, the Academy of Natural Sciences disclosed today.

The boy is James Ruhle, of Moorestown, N. J.

The animal whose remains he found was a ground sloth, says Dr. Horace G. Richards, the academy's associate curator of geology and paleontology.

Richards said the discovery, of parts of the backbone, is the first proof this great bear-like animal, 15 feet long, once roamed the South Jersey marshes. Similar finds have been previously reported—one of them by Thomas Jefferson—in what is now West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

The ground sloth long since became extinct. Its closest surviving relative is the curious animal called a sloth now found in South America and best known for its trick of hanging upside-down from a tree limb.

In an excavation for the New Jersey Turnpike not far from his home, Jim sometime ago discovered a cluster of shells embedded in green clay. Research convinced him they dated back some 50 million years.

He asked Dr. Richards to take a look, but before Richards arrived, Jim had uncovered four large bones, later identified as part of the backbone of the sloth.

They were buried under five feet of gravel, just above the green clay.

Jim thought he had uncovered the remains of a dinosaur, but paleontologists identified the bones as those of a sloth.

In appearance, Richards said, the giant sloth looked, because of its broad, flat tail, like a huge beaver. It had a face like a bear with a smashed-in nose.

When it paddled around South Jersey munching on herbs and leaves, the weather was just about what you'd find in the Carolinas nowadays. Scientists say the sloth couldn't adjust to the changing climate—he was a "bear" of little brain.

Optional Robot Shifts on New 1951 Fords

FORDOMATIC DRIVE—The 1951 Fords, featuring Fordomatic Drive, the new automatic transmission, will be on display today at all Ford dealerships. Addition of the Fordomatic will make available to buyers a choice of three transmissions and two engines. Shown above is the Ford custom fordor sedan with new refinements in styling, dual spinner radiator grille, longer wrap-around bumpers and new ornamentation.

DETROIT, Nov. 23 (AP).—The 1951 Ford passenger cars will be introduced tomorrow with no increase in list prices.

This was announced today by L. D. Crusoe, vice president and general manager. Ford recently presented its new Mercury and Lincoln cars with unchanged prices. The action was described as an effort to resist inflation.

Today Crusoe said: "Although many styling refinements and engineering advancements are features of the new models, and in spite of the long period of continuous cost increases, we are still holding the price line."

He added, however, that "how long price increases can be resisted depends on many things beyond the company's control." Major factors, he said, include availability and prices of materials as well as curtailment and interruption of production.

Major mechanical innovation in the new Ford cars is the new Fordomatic transmission. It combines torque conversion with a planetary gear train to provide automatic operation of the transmission. List price for the new transmission is $159.30. Another optional transmission is the overdrive, priced at $92. Also available at an additional cost of $12.50 are directional turn indicators.

Styling features of the new Fords include re-designed front end with dual-spinner front grille and a wider, longer, wrap-around bumper. The hood has been lowered, with winged hood ornament. Nameplates are on the sides of the front fenders and there is also a V-8 chromed insignia on the front fenders to identify the eight from the six cylinder models.

The speedometer pointer has a glowing ring which encircles and illuminates the figure showing the speed.

The automatic transmission is offered on both eight and six cylinder models.

Albania Raps Slav Action

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP).—Albania charges that Yugoslavia acted under "the facist policy dictated by her masters, the American and British imperialists," in closing the Albanian legation in Belgrade last Saturday.

The Tirana radio, official mouthpiece of Gen. Enver Hoxha's Communist government, broadcast its answer today. The radio said Yugoslavia had in effect severed diplomatic relations with Albania and quoted the Albanian Foreign Affairs Ministery as saying:

"The Albanian government refutes, out of hand, the base inventions and calumnies contained in the note which Yugoslavia seeks to use in justification of its hypocritacal, arbitrary closing of the Albanian legation in Belgrade."

Premier Marshal Tito's Yugoslav government had accused Albania of using the legation "exclusively for the purposes of conducting offending and provocative activities against Yugoslavia and its authorities." Yugoslavia closed her own legation in Tirana last July, charging that its personnel had suffered persecution and discrimination.

Plane Wreckage Seen on Mt. Moran; No Sign of Life

JACKSON, Wyo., Nov. 23 (UP). The wreckage of a California DC-3 which crashed on lofty Mount Moran with 21 persons aboard was located by a search plane today at the 11,500-foot level.

Carl Peterson of Aspen, Wyo., maneuvered his light plane to within 1500 feet of the missing plane and identified the tail section and part of the fuselage.

He said he was unable to see any signs of survivors.

A ground party headed by mountain climber Paul Petzoldt reached to within 3500 feet of the wreckage when dense clouds which had blanketed the 11,960-foot peak cleared sufficiently to permit Peterson to spot the wreckage.

On board the plane were 10 adult members of the New Tribes religious order, a crew of three and eight children. Two of the women aboard were widows of missionaries killed last June 9 when another plane owned by the missionary group crashed in the mountains of Colombia.

YMCA Conference Expected to Draw 300 Boys in Area

FBI Arrests Man For Hoover Threat

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 23 (AP).—Frank J. Corsoro, 27, Dunkirk, N. Y., was arrested at a hotel last night on a charge of sending a threatening letter through the mails.

The recipient: J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

R. B. Hood, head of the FBI office here, said Corsoro is held on Federal extortion charges. He said the letter was mailed early in October.

Firemen Fight Alarming Plan to Silence Sirens

By The Associated Press

The Nation's firefighters today sounded a four-alarm warning:

Don't take our sirens away from us.

The warning came from John P. Redmond, president of the International Association of Firefighters (AFL), which claims 68,000 members. He made his stand known in a statement, and later amplified it for a reporter.

Briefly, it's this:

Some defense planners have suggested that sirens be abolished on fire trucks and ambulances. Sirens, they say, should be reserved for air alarms.

The firemen contend that this is a vast mistake, that sirens are essential if firemen are to perform their work speedily and safely.

Redmond is an old firefighter himself—"put in 34 years in Chicago"—and he says experience in the last war proved it's silly to shush fire engines.

"We'd ring the bell, and we had a whistle up front on the intake," he said. "Well, I figure you can hear that bell about 10 feet. As for the whistle, when you're going fast it's okay, but it dies down when you slow down.

"Some guy tearing along at an intersection is liable to crash into you because he won't hear a thing."

Most cities, he said, saw the light and gave the siren back to the fireman before the war was over.

One exception: New York. And Redmond says New York is the only one so far to silence the fire laddies again.

'Beast' Turns Religious as Trial Nears

AUGSBURG, Germany, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Ilse Koch, the "Beast of Buchenwald," has turned to religion and philosophy in her jail cell as the German government prepares a new attempt to send her to prison for life on murder charges.

Ilse, 44, widow of the commander of the notorious wartime Nazi Buchenwald concentration camp, goes on trial Monday on charges of inciting to murder at least 45 times and of having attempted to incite 135 killings during the Nazi regime.

Witnesses are expected to describe how she made lampshades of tattooed human skin and dried shrunken heads and how she had men killed to provide the materials.

German law now forbids the the death penalty and the heaviest sentence she can receive is life imprisonment.

The Gallup Poll

Gallup Election Survey Accurate Within 1 Percent

By George Gallup
(Director, American Institute of Public Opinion)

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 23.—The preelection survey of the 1950 congressional election proved the most accurate one in national elections in the Institute's 15-year history.

Election returns available to date indicate the survey was accurate within 1 percentage point. With complete returns from all the congressional districts the error may possibly be cut to an even smaller margin.

Here are the findings as published November 6 and the election tabulations gathered from a sizable number of representative congressional districts.

Outside the South

| | Survey Report Nov. 6 | Election Nov. 7 Estimate |
|---|---|---|
| Republicans | 51½% | 52½% |
| Democrats | 48½ | 47½ |
| | 100% | 100% |

For the Nation as a whole the institute's preelection survey showed Democratic strength at 51 percent. The best available estimate to date for the House races only is 50 percent.

The November election was the eighth national election covered since the Institute was organized in 1935. Of these eight, Institute survey figures correctly indicated the winning party in all but the 1948 race.

In a period of 15 years, 245 preelection surveys have been made for city, state and national elections with an average error of 4 percentage points.

On the basis of its survey figures this year the Institute in its final report said that the Democrats would retain control of the House, which they did, but that the Republicans would make "moderate" seat gains. This proved correct.

The GOP gained 28 seats over the 1948 election whereas a gain of 47 seats were required to capture control.

As a result of experience gained in 1948, the Institute tried four innovations in the 1950 election.

In 1948 most of the polling had ceased 12 days or more before election. This year a large group of interviewers was kept busy questioning voters up to within three days of the election, in order to catch possible late campaign trends.

Actually during the entire course of the congressional campaign the Institute found virtually no change in national sentiment so far as the House races were concerned.

This is especially interesting in view of the contention of some Democratic political leaders that gloomy news from Korea in the closing days of the campaign gave an extra boost to Republican strength.

So far as the House races are concerned, the final Institute survey would indicate that if there was any change in sentiment nationally, it could not have been very great.

A second innovation in polling methods was a battery of questions to determine which persons in the sample polls were most likely to get to the polls on election day and which were most likely to be non-voters.

These questions proved valuable as a guide in handling the survey data, and further experimenting along this line will be made in future elections.

Third, more intensive and detailed questioning of "undecided" voters made it possible to allocate this group more scientifically and successfully in 1950 than in the 1948 election. The party "leanings" of most undecided voters were obtained through questioning.

Fourth, the Institute experimented with two different sampling systems in addition to the system widely used in previous elections. The new system proved highly accurate.

Canada Ready To Act Alone On Seaway

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Canada is ready to develop the St. Lawrence seaway shipping and power project without the aid of the United States, a government spokesman said.

Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier said, however, that the government would do so only with great reluctance.

Informed sources said Canada fears single-handed action might cause a slight breach in the historic good relations between the two countries. It was pointed out that if Canada did the work alone, American Great Lakes shippers would have to pay tolls for using Canadian canals and other facilities.

Chevrier lashed out last night in strong terms against American power and "navigation" interests which he said are holding up action on a joint project.

U. S. Maternal Death Rate Reduced to Less Than 1 in 1000 Live Births for New Record

For the first time in history, the maternal death rate of a large nation has been reduced to less than 1 death for each 1000 live births.

The new all-time record for the United States, or any other nation with such a mixed population, is reported in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

It was set last year by the United States, according to preliminary reports, the Journal said. When the 1949 rates for Sweden, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands and New Zealand become available, one or several of these smaller countries, with their more uniform populations, may join the select circle, the publication noted.

The Journal editors pointed out that heretofore a maternal death rate of 1 per 1000 live births had been considered the "apparently irreducible minimum." and concluded "it is clear maternal mortality is no longer a nation-wide problem."

The new record compares with 1.2 maternal deaths for 1000 live births in 1948, and with 6.2 in 1933. On that basis, it was noted "childbirth has been made quite safe."

"The fact that the chances of an expectant mother surviving the diseases of pregnancy, childbirth and the puerperium (confinement period) are now better than 999 out of 1000 is truly a story of human and social progress," said the Journal.

Reduction in the death rate since 1933 was attributed to (a) more births in hospitals, (b) improved medical care in home births, (c) development of prenatal care, (d) health education, (e) use of the new antibiotics and whole blood and blood derivatives, and (f) improved training in obstetrics.

Unlike the trend in many nations, the number of births attended by midwives in the United States is being rapidly reduced, it was pointed out.

Hanford 'Flying Saucer' Just High-Up Plane

RICHLAND, Wash., Nov. 23 (AP). Residents of this tri-city Hanford atomic works area thought they saw one of those "flying somethings," but the Hanford security division punctured the idea.

Witnesses differed on whether the high-flying thing was saucer-shaped or cigar-shaped. Many reckoned it was just a jet fighter in routine flight.

The security division said today the latter group was right. It explained that it was a military aircraft operating "in normal manner at 40,000 feet," that the sun pin-pointed the plane and vapor trail.

VA Doctor Sees Tattooing As Spreader of Jaundice

The belief that one form of jaundice is being spread by tattooing was advanced yesterday by a Veterans Administration physician.

The disease, hepatitis (inflammation of the liver) is spread from afflicted to healthy clients of the tattoo parlors by improper sterilization of needles and the artist's use of the same dye-pots for customer after customer, he said.

Dr. Ballard F. Smith, of Buffalo, N. Y., reported his findings in the current issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association on a study of 26 tattooed servicemen afflicted with the disease.

He noted that 18 of the patients (69 percent) had been tattooed within 49 to 154 days prior to the time their disease symptoms began to appear.

Of special significance, linking hepatitis and tattooing, he said, was the fact that 17 of the 18 had been tattooed at one particular establishment, in the Panama Canal Zone.

The tattooer, Dr. Smith said, stated that his work was not satisfactory unless he "drew blood" with the needles. Blood and serum were therefore directly introduced into the dye containers, which could carry the disease virus from a carrier to a common well for other customers, he concluded.

As a result of his investigations, it was reported, tattooing controls there now call for the use of individual dye containers, the boiling of containers and needles at least 30 minutes before reuse, and use of a one-needle printer in place of the four-needle battery often used.

Such controls, Dr. Smith said, "seem adequate, provided they are religiously followed."

World's Biggest Oil Pipeline Set to Open

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 23 (AP).—Crude oil, life-blood of the modern age, will begin pulsing across the Arabian Desert through the biggest pipeline in the world early in December, a spokesman for Arabian-American Oil (Arameo) said.

The first of what soon will be a daily flow of 300,000 barrels of oil a day is to gush through the 31-inch steel pipeline, from Saudi Arabia through Jordan, Syria and Lebanon, into a tanker off the ancient Phoenician city of Sidon on Lebanon's Mediterranean shore.

No longer will it be necessary for slow ships to tote the "black gold" around the 7000-mile route from the Persian Gulf through the Suez Canal.

Silver Dollar Entry Proves Too Popular

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 23 (AP).—On September 6, W. G. Ferrell opened a new jewelry store and used 378 silver dollars to spell the name in cement at the entrance.

Since then, various raids have been made on the cement by unknown persons.

Lost Charity Dollars

An interesting study of philanthropy conducted by F. Emerson Andrews of the Russell Sage Foundation estimates that money lost through "charity rackets" amounts to 100 million dollars a year. This loss is not tremendous in relation to the whole, Mr. Andrews concludes, "for it is less than 3 percent of the philanthropic dollar." But it represents "nearly as many dollars as all the endowed foundations together are able to spend." Of course, the net result is to deprive worthy causes of substantial sums that might otherwise be available to them.

It is a safe conclusion that a large portion of these lost philanthropic dollars come out of the pockets of low-income people. Mr. Andrews' research shows that more than 60 percent of the four billion dollars given to philanthropy in the United States in 1949 was contributed by very low-income groups. In many instances the small contributions of the poor are given with less care than the large contributions of the rich. These facts and conclusions seem to us to add up to a powerful argument for the law (which we have long advocated) requiring all agencies soliciting funds from the public (other than established churches) to give an accounting for their stewardship. And they emphasize the enormous advantage of giving through the Community Chest.

Crime And Politics

In bemoaning the influence of the Kefauver crime investigation on the elections, Democratic bosses in Chicago and elsewhere are missing the essential lesson of their defeats. That lesson is simply that when voters have the facts, no party can put up candidates with shadowy or underworld connections and expect them to win. Such was particularly the case in Chicago, where Senator Lucas lost much support because the Democratic candidate for sheriff of Cook County—nominated against the counsel of many leaders such as Senator Douglas—was shown to have amassed a fortune of $300,000 on a $9000 salary. The growing independent-mindedness of voters is something neither party can afford to ignore.

Republicans have looked gleefully on the fact that with the exception of Philadelphia, the Kefauver Committee disclosures of city corruption worked mostly against the Democrats. It would be unfair to say that this is the only reason for Republican support of continued investigation, but certainly some Republicans see in the crime committee a potent political weapon. The weapon is, of course, two-edged. It worked against the Democrats principally because they were the party in power and were blamed where corruption did exist—as, for example, in New York City. But the disclosures undoubtedly also had an influence in awakening the public generally to the interplay between crime and politics, and it is highly significant that in California, Massachusetts and Montana voters beat down proposals for legalized gambling of one sort or another. Although the purpose of the crime investigation, in itself, has no direct bearing on the caliber of candidates chosen, the attendant effect in putting the parties on their mettle is likely to be an extremely useful by-product.

A Real Dilemma

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer's National Production Authority faces a real dilemma. It must cut down production of civilian goods to build up stockpiles and release scarce materials that will be needed to produce military goods. Yet if allocations orders are issued too far in advance of the placement of military orders, many plants will be forced to close down and workers will be laid off, possibly for a long time. On the other hand, if restrictions on civilian output are postponed until job-creating defense orders are in hand, scarce materials will have been consumed, shortages will be intensified, and the defense program will be retarded.

Although Secretary of Defense Marshall said recently that military orders would be timed to take up any slack resulting from cutdowns in civilian production, it is obvious that a certain amount of industrial dislocation and accompanying unemployment will be unavoidable, if the control program is to be effective. It requires sound judgment and a good deal of informed guessing to determine when to act and how much pressure to apply to the civilian segment of the economy. NPA decisions as to the timing and the severity of allocations orders are the more difficult because the armed services cannot give trustworthy estimates of their ultimate requirements. Moreover, if civilian production were cut back too far in advance of a compensating expansion of military production, the resultant transitional decline in industrial activity and the accompanying rise in unemployment would arouse public hostility and might endanger the whole control program.

The NPA order reducing civilian aluminum consumption brought protests from producers of aluminum products and workers in the industry in advance of issuance. Walter Reuther, head of the United Automobile Workers, and William Green, president of the AFL, are also protesting that stringent and premature allocations orders will result in mass layoffs of workers. Their opinions cannot safely be ignored, since the cooperation of labor is needed to insure the success of the production control program. As a matter of fact, Secretary Sawyer has announced that labor will be represented in the NPA and given an opportunity to present its views on all production and cutback orders.

The chief weakness of this cooperative approach, which is otherwise economically sound and tactically wise, is that labor representatives may overstress the need for sustained civilian production to keep unemployment at a minimum during the transition period. If that happens, production controls may come too late and be too feeble to achieve their purpose—mobilization of the national resources for defense.

Letter To The Chinese

If we were writing to the Chinese Communist mission under Wu Hsiu-chuan for delivery at Lake Success, we should say:

We are told that two of the chief characteristics of the Chinese are intellectual curiosity and realism. We hope you will exercise both of them during your stay. If you will look around you, instead of insulating yourselves as your Russian friends do, you will find that this country is steeled to go the limit in backing the antiaggression policy of the United Nations. We shall not allow the world organization to be defied or defeated. If the Chinese intend to frustrate the United Nations in defending the peace, there will be no hesitation on the part of Americans, come what may.

For verification of this statement we refer you to any foreign reporter in this free country. The latest witness is a correspondent of Le Monde, J. J. Servan-Schreiber. After a tour of America he reports:

> The American public is not afraid of a general war. No more than any other people do they like the prospect. But much less than any other people are they scared of it.

That is the testimony of an objective foreign correspondent. You would find the same feeling yourself if you looked and listened.

But you would also detect a sadness over the crisis in which we find ourselves as a result of the Chinese challenge. The American people have no quarrel with the Chinese people. Indeed, no people are more secure in American affections. The attachment stems from childhood memories of digging holes in the ground to get to China and the missionary box in the home and at Sunday school. Upon this sentiment the whole American policy toward China has been founded.

Our China policy is simple to describe. It is to respect the territorial integrity and administrative independence of China. Secretary John Hay defined it after the foreign excesses that occurred during the so-called Boxer Rebellion exactly 50 years ago. The Russians pillaged Manchuria, and there was danger that this would set up competition, with the prospect that all China would be carved up among the predatory powers. John Hay stopped this rake's progress in its tracks, and thus China as a sovereign entity was saved by American diplomacy. A Japanese historian, Dr. Roy H. Akagi, calls this and the preceding American policy of the Open Door, "the greatest legacy the nineteenth century diplomacy had given to China and the twentieth century Magna Carta of China's international relations."

He was right. Down the years we have never swerved from faithfulness to that American policy. When American diplomacy has not sufficed to maintain it, American arms have been enlisted. This was the case in 1941. The United States could have sold China down the river to rampaging Japan. Secretary Hull refused to take the line of least resistance. And this led to our going to war by the side of China—for the preservation of the integrity of China.

American diplomacy has been constructive in helping China to be free as well as in helping to keep China intact. China used to have a semicolonial status under what you call "unequal treaties" or "treaties of national betrayal." In 1927 we led the West in signing the first equal treaty acknowledging China's tariff independence. In 1946 we signed the first equal commercial treaty ever negotiated by a Chinese government. Three years before we had abandoned by treaty the privilege of having port concessions and our own law courts on Chinese soil. In recent years there have been several other Sino-American agreements. These provided for assistance in your war with Japan—assistance in the form of huge amounts of money and goods which, as to the bulk, are nonreimbursable. The Sino-American story is capped by the part we played in raising China to the level of equality alongside the great powers. Over Russia's objections in 1943, China (not Nationalist China, but China) was acknowledged a Great Power in the postwar United Nations. It was Secretary Hull who insisted upon it.

The record is clean, devoid of impure motives. It is the record of a country which has been an ally, always a friend, never an enemy.

American policy which is here summarized was not dictated by big business. Our trade with you has never been more than 4 percent of our total commerce. The equal treaty of 1946 was actually resented by what you call "Wall Street" as putting American business at a disadvantage with its competitors. Nor is there any aggression or warmongering or imperialism in the record. Surely the renunciation of the nearby Philippines after the recent war should be proof positive. Toward China antiaggression, not aggression, has been the rule; aid, not capitalistic exploitation, the characteristic. It is safe to say that toward no other country has sentiment played such a dominant role in American policy as toward China.

Now your foreign relations are based upon and governed by your 1950 treaty with Russia. You act as if you had discovered a perfect identity of interest with the Soviet Union. Most Americans think you have been absorbed by, rather than allied with, Moscow—that you are a creature, a puppet, or a satellite.

Let us look at the Sino-Russian instrument upon which your present foreign relations are founded. It was aimed at taking the place of the Wang-Molotov Treaty of 1945 whereby the Russians secured rights and interests in Manchuria at the expense of Chinese sovereignty. This latter treaty was signed while the same kind of Russian pillaging of Manchuria was going on that had been done 50 years before at the time of the Boxer Rebellion. Almost everything mechanical in sight in Manchuria was carted away to Russia.

Such was the situation which Mao Tze-tung went to Moscow to regularize. What did he get? He got in the 1950 treaty merely a tighter bond and no substantial change in Manchuria. The 1950 deal, like the 1945 deal, imposed the same kind of servitude as to Manchuria which the Russians secured in the unequal treaty of the 90's with the effete Manchu dynasty of China.

Every schoolboy in China remembers that arrangement. After the Sino-Japanese War of 1894-5, the Russians intervened to stop Japan from collecting the spoils of victory, viz, post and rail and land concessions in south Manchuria. The while the Russians protested loudly that the integrity of China should remain inviolate. To insure against any recurrence of foreign encroachment they entered in 1896 into a secret treaty with the Manchu regime in Peking with the stated object of protecting China against any similar encroachments. The Chinese were delighted over this Russian intervention. Alas, the Russian embrace turned out to be the hug of the Bear. In 1898 the Russians themselves seized the very concessions which they had compelled Japan to hand back to China.

Count Witte, then Minister of Finance in the Czar's government, protested, but in vain, and in his memoirs published after his death, he left a statement of his sense of outrage over his own government's duplicity. It was, he said, "the height of treachery and faithlessness." This, as we say, was the model for your 1949 treaty with Soviet Russia. The Bear never changes in the Far East because his thirst first for warm water and now for power is never assuaged. There is a French saying, "The more it changes, the more it remains the same." History is like that, a heap of facts which add up to the same conclusions.

Contrast this history with ours. Ours is a record which fortifies our President's words assuring you of honorable accommodation about Korea—assurances which have been underlined by the restraint imposed upon our airmen toward Manchuria. Our sole interest is to put down aggression and defend the integrity of Korea—ward of the United Nations—as for 50 years we have defended the integrity of China. An integral Korea is the kind of Korea that will be a better neighbor than a Korea torn in civil war with one part acting as a puppet of Russia. It was precisely this situation (of which imperialist Russia took advantage) that brought on the war between Russia and Japan in 1904. If your intervention in Korea brings on another conflict, then China will simply have been acting as Russia's pawn, sacrificing her manpower in an effort to serve Russia's imperial interests.

This would be the second time that China had served as a pawn for Russia. Go back 15 years. We now know that but for Russia's skillful effort in diverting Japan's wrath against China, Japan would have attacked Siberia. That is what the militarists of Japan wanted to do. But the Chinese Communists, egged on by Moscow, forced Chiang Kai-shek's hand as the price of his release from the kidnap at Sian, and the Russians, having accomplished the design, promptly signed a neutrality agreement with Japan, leaving China alone to face the aggressor till America came in. Russia stayed out of the Far East all the time that China was bleeding. Then, as Japan was about to lay down her arms, she intervened in Manchuria, having first denounced the neutrality agreement with Japan. Nor did the Russians then show their hand as your friends. In the war they sent supplies to Chiang Kai-shek, and in the Wang-Molotov agreement of 1945 actually pledged moral and material support to his Nationalist government.

The history of Russia in Asia, in short, is the history of one double-cross after another—all at the expense of China. That is what makes it complicated. To play the pawn again—even on the fairest of promises—would be the opposite of realistic, it would be quixotic. Are you prepared to risk the consequences? That would be tragedy for all. Nobody would win, everybody would lose, and your aspiration to build a new China from the grassroots would be blasted forever.

Loan To Spain

There is a strong flavor of intellectual dishonesty in the Government's professed distate for releasing funds voted for economic aid to Spain on the basis that Spain is a "bad credit risk." Whatever moral basis there may have been in separating the sheep from the goats in granting aid to foreign countries, it is fantastic to dredge up their credit standing now as a criterion.

How good a credit risk were France and Italy after the war, or even England? The only European country which any sane banker would have considered a decent credit risk was Switzerland, which didn't need our help. The others were in as bad or worse economic shape than Spain today. We helped them because otherwise they would have collapsed economically, thereby opening a Pandora's box of social and political chaos which we dared not contemplate.

Now Spain needs help. While the other European countries were getting back on their feet thanks to ECA dollars, Spain was trying to get along on her own. She might have made it, were it not for a series of drought-ridden summers which ruined successive harvests and bit deeply into the electrical power on which much of Spanish industry depends. Spain needs help badly, yet it has been too proud to beg for it. And it probably has as much title to it as—say—Germany and Italy, who were our enemies a few short years ago, and Sweden, whose neutrality was not much less pro-German than Spain's.

If it is dictators we dislike, any shred of justification for moral discrimination disappears as soon as we offer aid to Tito. But if moral issues are down the drain and we are dealing in expediency, military or otherwise, Spain clearly warrants our help.

"Cabinet Changes"

In your November 18 editorial, "Cabinet Changes" you state that Secretary Acheson has been the "victim of vicious criticism." Some time back, when serious criticism of Acheson began, I reserved my judgment concerning him as I had previously had a rather favorable feeling toward him. Now it has been demonstrated that throughout the Nation millions of voters do not have full confidence in him. On every hand, including your paper, one hears of the need for a united front to meet the world situation. Whether the criticism of Acheson is justified or not, it seems extremely doubtful that such a united front is possible with Mr. Acheson in disfavor with so many citizens.

I have "reexamined" my feelings where Acheson is concerned and have come to the conclusion that my change of attitude is not the result of Senator McCarthy's charges. He was only one of several who have laid open for consideration the various circumstances that have weakened public confidence in Secretary Acheson. For instance: Senator McCarthy did not force Acheson to adopt, approve or condone the Chinese policy; he did not force Acheson to say "I shall not turn my back on Alger Hiss." McCarthy had no part in the adoption and announcement by Acheson of a policy leaving Formosa and Korea outside of defense plans.

These are the things that convince me that Secretary Acheson is the victim of his own errors and has destroyed his usefulness. Two important features weigh heavily with me—the failure of the China policy and the ignoring of General MacArthur's advice in Pacific strategy.

Now Mr. Acheson derides any idea that we "reexamine" our policies in Europe and elsewhere. Prudent people constantly "reexamine" their policies and change them if necessary. I believe they should not only be "reexamined" but also that they should be fully explained to the American people. The full implications of commitments made at Yalta, Tehran and Potsdam should also be explained.

Abused Welcome

I was very pleased the other day when a young lady representing a "Welcome" service knocked on my door. However, my pleasure didn't last very long. The young lady presented me with quite a few advertising folders from various stores and was very particular to explain each one to me, but after she left I found one that she hadn't mentioned at all.

"Sneaked" in with the rest of the literature was a leaflet entitled Profit or Freedom put out by the American Education Committee of the American Medical Association. I very much resent this "sneak" method of "slipping over" on the public AMA political propaganda.

China In The U. N.

The world is anxiously awaiting the outcome of the United Nations' deliberations which will begin upon the arrival of the Chinese delegation in New York. Mutual understanding or antipathy born of ignorance, peace or war, may be the culmination of the course set at Lake Success. It behooves those responsible for United States policy to use this meeting to demonstrate the sincerity of American pledges of respect for the rights and interests of the Chinese people.

Surely the most elementary way to evidence, and also elicit, understanding and respect is to welcome the government of China into membership in the United Nations. Without this, all proclamations of honorable intent become hollow, meaningless. The dignity and self-respect of the Chinese nation may lead it justly to demand this recognition as a minimum indication of the good faith of Western nations.

"Bitter Rice"

It would seem that only an inadvertence could excuse the judgment of The Washington Post, much valued by its regular readers, for publishing in its November 19 issue, a picture selected from a foreign film, Bitter Rice. The grossness of the picture is un-American in character, and should offend the good taste that normally abides in our people.

Corporation Tax Fictions

Before the House Ways and Means Committee, union spokesmen urged the raising of the excess profits tax. Secretary Snyder recommended a four billion dollar goal, the AFL urged a five billion total, the CIO raised it to six or seven billion. The United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers urged taking all incomes above $25,000.

The proponents of high corporation taxes live in a land of make-believe. What is a corporation? A large number of partners with limited liability. In its evolution, business passed through the stage of partnership with unlimited liability, then the joint venture with limited liability, and the joint stock association, and finally, the corporation. The invention of the corporation is at the foundation of the rapid economic development of the United States and the increasing diffusion of wealth among all classes, including the smallest saver. Harold G. Moulton in his latest book, Our Dynamic Economy, ranks the invention of the corporation along with the great mechanical inventions of the industrial era. The corporation attracts rivulets of capital into a pool which feeds the American economy.

One corporation, the American Telephone & Telegraph, has almost a million shareholders. General Motors has about 500,000. U. S. Steel has about 300,000. However, the overwhelming majority are small people who own $1500 or less at average market values. With the increased estate taxes, the number of stockholders has been rising steadily and rapidly. In none of these corporations does any stockholder own even a small fraction of 1 percent of the stock.

The tax on the corporation is a tax on the stockholder. Without stockholders, the corporation is nothing. The proposal to increase the corporation income tax to 50 percent or 55 percent is a fallacy. It merely increases the burden on little people. The British practice exposes this fallacy. There the corporation tax is really a tax on the stockholder deducted at the source. With the dividend goes a tax notice which a small stockholder presents to the inland revenue board and he gets a refund. But the big British stockholder pays a supertax in addition. But in the United States, the millions of small stockholders who may be in the tax-exempt class or in the 20 percent bracket, pay via the corporation a rate of 45 percent deducted at the source, but receive no tax credit. They would pay practically nothing if they were small partners.

The concessions in taxation during World War II, such as the five-year depreciation allowance, enabled the corporations to put up modern plants and build up a good cash position out of depreciation reserves. Thus they were enabled after the war to increase employment and to lower costs. The money not taken by the Government in taxation remains as undistributed profit which is a trust fund for future employment. A study of the 50-year record of the United States Steel Corp. shows that dividends were less than the profits plowed back into the business. These were used to increase plant and thus create first, jobs for building trades and subsequently, jobs for new steel workers.

Taxation according to ability to pay is taxation according to the ability to employ. One way of checking increasing employment is to tax away the corporation's ability to expand and modernize. Each corporation is a small WPA to the extent that it can give employment to expand its facilities.

But the Government needs money and must raise it somehow. Government necessity requires ignoring ethical treatment of the taxpayer. This is not the place for details. The alternative is to tax production less and consumption more, or the corporation less and the individual more.

Increasing taxes on individual dividends is preferable to increasing taxes on corporation paper profits. A sound tax policy will require clearer thinking than the unions' spokesmen displayed in the proposals before Congress.

Inflationary Squeeze Play

By Marquis Childs

Devil And The Deep

THE MORE the Democrats contemplate the months ahead, the more they realize the trap they are in. That old phrase—between the devil and the deep blue sea—has rarely applied with such literalness as it does to the party in power.

On the one side is the explosive pressure of rising prices. On Monday the latest consumer price index will be announced by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Since all prices have been steadily climbing, no wizardry is required to predict that it will be close to the all-time high reached in 1948 if, indeed, it does not surpass that peak.

The wholesale price index has already passed the high-water mark. Short of some sudden shift, consumer prices follow as night follows day.

What is more, the ablest economists in Government see no end to this trend. It may be temporarily arrested during the winter months as a result of cutbacks in consumer production. But this is likely to be only temporary.

Cotton futures prices hit an all-time high on the New York Cotton Exchange the other day with December deliveries opening up to 44 cents a pound. Natural raw rubber brought as high as 92 cents a pound for December delivery, with some slackening off indicated after the end of the year. This compares with 20 cents a pound less than a year ago.

THE KOREAN war and the rearmament program, plus the inevitable accompanying speculation, have been largely responsible. Some blame a sudden spurt of stockpiling which put the stockpilers into the commodity market at the same time everybody else was trying to buy raw materials. While the Korean war may be at a temporary standstill, the armament program has just begun to be felt. The likelihood is for pressures equally great during the coming year.

If this is the devil, and a very active devil it is, then the deep blue sea is represented by the alternative, which is across-the-board controls with a rollback in prices. The fear within the Administration is that such controls in "peacetime" would be difficult or impossible to administer.

One reason for the fear is the difficulty now being encountered on every hand in getting people to fill the limited number of jobs necessary to administer regulations now in force. Whether it is because the sense of urgency simply is not there or because Government salaries look very small against inflated prices or for whatever reason, businessmen are just saying no.

The struggle President Truman is having to get a director of price stabilization illustrates what is happening on every level. It was thought one man had been persuaded, but at the last minute he wriggled out. Cyrus Ching has agreed to be chairman of the Wage Stabilization Board, but eight full-time members are still to be named.

THE administration of across-the-board controls would require not merely a number of new-paid officials. It would also take an army of volunteers willing to give their time as a patriotic service in an emergency. Whether such voluntary service would be forthcoming is a question.

Short of a full-scale shooting war, the public protest against price and other controls at the consumer level would be loud and persistent. The discontent would produce black-marketing and there would immediately arise the problem of how to punish violators. A fairly extensive black market has already developed in steel products, with fabricators and manufacturers paying way above quoted prices.

But if controls would be unpopular, the pinch of rising prices is almost equally so. That is being demonstrated in a variety of ways. One of the factors in the recent election was resentment at the inflationary squeeze.

With the party in power caught in this unhappy position, the party out of power has theoretically only to sit back and watch the situation get worse, meanwhile supplying a few reminders that the Democrats must be responsible since there they are sitting in the driver's seat. But inasmuch as the national welfare is directly at stake, this may not be enough. The average citizen may expect something more than negativism.

To sit in the driver's seat in this twilight zone between peace and war is distinctly uncomfortable, especially as the passengers grow restive and make rude remarks. But the simple process of changing the driver may not be enough in this instance to slow down the machine.

Garfield Assassination

Your November 2 story, "United States Presidents Assassins' Victims," states that President Garfield was shot July 2, 1881, at "the old Baltimore & Ohio Railway station here." This occurred, however, at the Baltimore & Potomac Railway station. No longer standing, the building was at B st. (now Constitution ave.) and 6th st. nw., and for many years a brass marker indicated where the President, accompanied by Secretary of State Blaine, was standing when shot.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Why Help A Communist?

THE Yugoslav aid bill, the first item of business before the Congress, is entirely likely to be gutted, festooned with impossible restrictions, or defeated outright. Already the politicians, terrified since November 7 of anything which smacks of communism, are muttering: Why should we help the Communist Tito?

There are a good deal of extremely practical answers to this question. But the only answer which is likely to convince those advocates of "economy," the conservative coalition in Congress, is a simple exercise in arithmetic.

The Yugoslav aid bill is designed merely to keep Tito in business. Thirty million dollars, more or less, has been found for this purpose from funds already appropriated. But if Tito is really to stay in business, a direct grant of 50 million dollars or so is essential. If this is not forthcoming, drought-ridden Yugoslavia will descend into famine, and from famine into chaos. It will then be easy enough for the Kremlin to pick up the pieces.

NOW consider the military mathematics of this situation. Merely to equip a single American infantry division costs 75 million dollars. It costs another 94 million dollars—$5000 per man—to maintain such a division at full strength for a year; for a grand total of about 170 million dollars.

Tito commands 32 divisions. Provided Tito is kept in business, these divisions can be counted on absolutely to fight in case the Kremlin attacks. Thus the Congress is being asked to appropriate rather less than a third of the price tag for an American division for a year, in order to keep in being 32 divisions, the strongest anti-Soviet force on the continent of Europe. Even in simple dollar and cents terms, it will surely be insanity for the most economy-minded men in Congress to reject this sort of military bargain.

Yet the meaning of what has been happening in Yugoslavia cannot be measured simply in dollars and cents. For the plain fact is that Tito and other Yugoslav leaders, being realists, have now recognized that simple survival lies with the West. And if only the American Government and the American Congress are equally realistic, an opportunity lies to hand decisively to change the whole world balance of power in favor of the West.

THE evidence of the shift in the Tito government's policy is overwhelming. For example, when it was first proposed that about 15 million dollars be found for feeding the Yugoslav army out of military aid program funds, knowledgeable American officials in both Washington and Belgrade shook their heads. Tito could never agree to align himself so openly with that instrument of "imperialist aggression," the Atlantic alliance.

Yet Tito agreed without the slightest hesitation. With similar alacrity, he signed agreements requiring, among other things, full publicity on American aid within Yugoslavia. He then showed he meant to keep the bargain by reprinting on the first page of Borba, the Communist Party newspaper, the text of Ambassador George Allen's speech welcoming the first shipment of aid. And a few days later Borba published a deeply significant article by Milovan Djilas, Tito's top propagandist.

This article not only declared that the break with the Soviet Union was "unbridgeable," but also included as devastating, and as accurate, a description of internal Soviet suppression and external Soviet imperialism as has ever been written. What this means is simply that Tito's Yugoslavia is now, or soon will be ready for full participation in the Western alliance.

Keeping Tito's Yugoslavia in business is thus only a necessary step. Tito should be invited into the Atlantic Pact, as soon as the time is ripe.

The Yugoslav army, whose weapons are rapidly becoming obsolete, should then be fully re-equipped under the Military Aid Program. And as the Yugoslav government moves, as it is already moving, gradually toward freedom, the economy of Yugoslavia should be so strengthened that Yugoslavia will present a devastating contrast to the enchained and exploited satellites of eastern Europe.

SUCH A bold policy would not only decisively reinforce the military power of the Western alliance at one stroke, it would also have a corrosive effect within the whole Soviet empire. And it would have a healthy influence throughout western Europe, whose people have no stomach for a simple struggle between American capitalism and Russian communism, but who understand the meaning of a contest between national independence and national slavery.

Tito's communism, moreover, is a positive asset to the Western world, as the Kremlin's insane fear and hatred of Titoism demonstrates. Tito cannot cease to be a Communist, and still survive. Yet simply because Tito is a Communist, Congress may well defeat the Yugoslav aid bill. Failing that, Congress is wholly likely to drive Tito back to a policy of doomed isolation by attaching impossible internal and external conditions to the bill. If either happens, it will be a pretty convincing sign that the American Government is no longer capable of acting with that hard-headed regard for its self-interest which the role of a great power demands.

Internal Revenue Chief Demands Kefauver Submit Evidence of Agent, Gangster Ties

By The Associated Press

Commissioner of Internal Revenue George J. Schoeneman said last night an "intensive investigation" is already in progress into charges of an alleged pay-off link between racketeers and Federal agents.

Schoeneman issued a statement denouncing criticism of the Bureau of Internal Revenue as "wholly unwarranted."

The Federal official said he "challenged" Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee to submit "any evidence which his committee has uncovered which would lead to a Federal indictment for tax evasion or disclosure of criminal conduct on the part of any bureau employe which is not already in the hands of investigators."

In San Francisco, Kefauver promised a speedy investigation of the Mountain City Consolidated Copper Co. of Nevada after a former Internal Revenue agent testified that the company is a dummy stock outfit run by Treasury Department agents.

The witness, William Burkett, testified before Kefauver's committee that racketeers and others with income tax troubles escape paying penalties to the Government by buying stock in the company.

Burkett, a former special agent in the Internal Revenue Bureau's intelligence unit, said he had an affidavit from Gertrude Jenkins, convicted abortionist, saying she paid $5000 to Patrick Mooney, former Internal Revenue collector in Reno, to escape tax prosecution.

The affidavit said the money was presumably for stock in the Mountain City Co., but she received no stock.

In his statement, Commissioner Schoeneman said an investigation of the case is now in progress by Federal authorities, and declared that the Kefauver committee "stepped into this matter in the midst of an intensive investigation of it."

Schoeneman said "it takes more than idle rumors and the unverified mumblings of a disgruntled former employe to produce indictments."

"Both bureau and Justice officials have emphasized many times that premature airing of matters under investigation frequently leads to dissipation of evidence necessary to procure indictments and convictions in the Federal courts:

Theron Lamar Caudle, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Justice Department's Tax Division, said the Gertrude Jenkins case was received from the Bureau of Internal Revenue by the Tax Division "long before this investigation of the Kefauver committee, with recommendation of prosecution for evasion on income taxes.

"This woman was convicted of abortion by the State of California and is now serving two to five years for this crime," Caudle said.

"Far from supporting the inference that there would be no prosecution of her income tax case, the case has been and is now under consideration by the Tax Division and is certainly not a closed case."

I have read your No. 52, November tenth, to Davis, quoting Baltimore Sun, Washington Post and New York Sun. Frankly, I do not believe that these newspapers carry any particular weight as expressions of public opinion, nor do I believe that any editorial writer—I repeat "any"—has the knowledge of facts and circumstances open to the Administration; therefore, instead of quoting a newspaper you are merely quoting one member of the staff or the opinion of an individual owner.

I do not mean to suggest that information to Ambassadors or Delegates, advising them of what might be called the average of newpaper opinion in the United States is not sometimes advisable, but again, this may cause a wrong impression in the mind of the Ambassador or Delegate. It is well to remember newspaper opinion and prophesy in the summer and autumn of 1936.

F.D.R. to Rhoda Hinkley

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Dec. 16, 1937

Dear Rhoda:

You shot so many questions at me that it would take me half an hour to answer them verbally. The simplest way of putting it to you is that Boake Carter's statements, as a general proposition, are half of them untrue and the other half misstated. The particular ones you wrote me about fall into both categories.

The point is that not only this Administration but this Nation want peace—but at the same time they do not want the kind of peace which means definite danger to us at home in the days to come.

I happen to know a very nice Chinese family which lives quite far in the interior. For years they have said that China wanted peace at any price and that they felt no possible harm could come to them back from the seacoast. The other day most of the family was wiped out by some Japanese bombing planes which wrecked their community and killed one thousand people. I got a message from one of the survivors which read "we are no longer for peace at any price."

I hope to see you one of these days soon.

My best wishes for a happy Christmas.

Very sincerely yours,

Boake Carter, the radio commentator, was one of the leading opponents of administration policy in the Far East. He was opposed to what he called our "meddling" in the Orient, and argued that our commercial stake in China did not warrant the risk of involvement of war with Japan.

Rhoda Hinkley was a Dutchess County acquaintance of the Roosevelts, active in civic affairs.

F.D.R. to Mackenzie King in Ottawa

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Dec. 21, 1937

My dear Mackenzie:

First of all, a very Merry Christmas to you—and a New Year which I trust will give you less of anxiety than 1937.

I know that both of us feel that this year has marked little progress toward the goal of peace-and now at its close the Far East gives up mutual concern in addition to the threats of armed banditry in Europe.

When I think back, even to the Spring of 1933. I cannot help but feel that we have slipped back; we have not even maintained the position of the peace of that year.

I am wondering if you are planning a visit in this direction during the coming month or two. I think it is time for us to chat again and, as you know, the White House door stands ajar. If there is a chance of your coming, all you have to do is to disregard legations and call me up personally to tell me you are coming for a little visit.

Always sincerely,

F.D.R. to Sumner Wells

THE WHITE HOUSE,

Memorandum for the Under-Secretary of State:

Some way, somehow we must stop the leaks in regard to the diplomatic appointments. It is becoming a positive scandal. I realize, of course, that there was much general conversation about Kennedy and Wilson, even though Arthur Krock swears he got the Kennedy tip from the State Department.

Yesterday the Star had the story about Davies going to Brussels. I have not mentioned the subject to anyone—even the White House staff. And on top of it comes the telegram from Bogota that Des Portes is to go to Colombia.

I do not know who handles these things down the line in the State Department, but I think the time has come to announce that if in the future there is any leak, everybody down the line will be sent to Siam!

F.D.R.

The nominations of Hugh Wilson to succeed Dodd at Berlin and Joseph P. Kennedy to succeed Bingham at London were sent up to the Senate on the day this memorandum was written, but the story leaked to the New York Times a month earlier.

Arthur Krock, head of the Times Washington bureau, was one of the best informed correspondents in Washington.

Secretary Hull, in answer to this memo, described to F. D. R. the system within the department designed to prevent leaks. He pointed out the many ways in which such leaks could originate outside the department.

F.D.R. to George R. Holmes in Washington

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Jan. 13, 1938

Dear George:

I am thrilled that you have been elected President of the Gridiron Club and if you start to get dignified with me, I will "pull off" a personal skit on you!

Your Presidency will go down into history as the era when the President of the United States undertook to wear a black tie and dinner coat to a Gridiron Dinner—and got away with it.

As ever yours,

Grace Tully reports that F.D.R. received no support in his desire to break precedent in the matter of dress, and wore a white tie as tradition required.

F.D.R to Arthur Murray in London

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Feb. 10, 1938

Dear Arthur:

I begin to think that events in this world move with a velocity which increases with every passing year. Even since your letter, written on January twenty-fourth, so many new things have happened that you are completely out of date! Another crisis in Germany, but it does prove your rightness making unkind remarks about some people who see in Nazi-ism ideals of peace and good-will.

I am getting on better with some of your people—for they are really showing signs of wanting to meet me part of the way—perhaps not 50 percent yet! I, too, am pursued by catch-cries in this country, and I am in the midst of a long process of education—and the process seems to be working slowly but surely.

It is grand news that you and Faith can really come over this Autumn. Give her my thanks for that lovely view from An Cala—which some day I must see.

My present plan—if peace remains and if Congress goes home in June—is to stay in these parts until after my boy John's wedding and the visit of the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden, about July first, and then take a trip on a cruiser for a month, either in the further Pacific or South Atlantic. This means that from the middle of August I shall be up off and on at Hyde Park until November, so if you can get here then—preferably between September fifteenth and November first—it would be perfect. As you know, the really hot weather will be over by the middle of September.

My warm regards to you both,

As ever yours,

Colonel Murray had written critically of the appeasement policy of the Chamberlain government. The new crisis in Germany was the bloodless "purge" of February 4th in which Hitler eliminated the surviving German conservatives in the foreign office and the armed forces. This purge was a prelude to his incorporation of Austria and his operation against Czechoslovakia.

F.D.R.'s remark that he was getting along "better" with some of the English reflected the increasing coordination of British and American policies in the Far East.

F.D.R. to Cordell Hull

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Jan. 21, 1938

Confidential memorandum for the Secretary of State:

Please read enclosed No. 27 from Allison at Nanking. I am inclined to think that we might consider giving out this or a similar telegram in order to lay the groundwork for proof that the Japanese Government is powerless to stop these depredations by Japanese soldiers and that the Japanese army is either unwilling or unable to afford adequate protection to American property.

This case relating to an American Mission and to Chinese women refugees on American property furnishes a good example. I am inclined to think it is the time to make clear the general situation in China and that it will help to show the distinction between the Japanese Government and the Japanese Army. Few Americans can object to our protection of Americans against an army which is out of the control of its own civilian government at home.

For further evidence, see the marked part of Grew's No. 39.

F.D.R.

So wanton and lawless was the behavior of the Japanese troops upon their entry into China's capital city, Nanking, that there were widespread reports that the troops had mutinied.

Accounts of unlawful interference by Japanese troops with American nationals' interests and property were pouring in from all over occupied China, but the reports from Allison, Third Secretary of the Embassy in Nanking, were particularly shocking. At the same time there were vigorous demands from isolationists that we pull out o. China completely.

Church Puts Employes On Social Security

The Calvary Baptist Church at 8th and H sts. nw., one of the largest Protestant congregations in the city, has decided to permit its 31 lay employes to take advantage of the Government's expanded social security program.

According to Church Information Service, the congregation voted overwhelmingly for the proposal at a meeting Wednesday.

Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of the church, said that 25 of the 31 employes affected had expressed a desire to come under social security. Ordained clergymen are not covered by the Social Security Act.

Five Washington men are members of the board of directors of the Park and Recreation Council, just organized in Chicago. They are: Milo F. Christiansen, District Recreation Department superintendent; Dana Parkinson and John Sieker, United States Forest Service, and Sidney S. Kennedy and Conrad L. Wirth, National Park Service.

Robert E. Everly of Glencoe, Ill., is president of the council. The purpose of the organization is to make the public fully conscious of the attractions and services offered by the many public parks and recreation centers throughout the country.

Dual Lecture Set On America's 'Mission'

A dual lecture on "The Mission of America in the Power Age from the Viewpoint of the West and East," will be featured at a regional meeting of Baha'is at the McLean Fire House at 8 p. m. Saturday.

During the lecture, Stanwood Cobb, director of the Chevy Chase Country Day School, will speak for the West, and Mrs. Behjat Joy Arnold, of Virginia Beach, Va., will speak for the East.

Bahaism is a religion which originated in Persia 106 years ago.

Old Ritchie, Md., School Is Damaged by Fire

Fire last night caused damage of approximately $4000 to the old Ritchie (Md.) School on Walker Mill rd.

The fire was discovered by Lieut. Elon Turner of the Upper Marlboro headquarters, Prince Georges County Police, who radioed headquarters. Fire apparatus responded from Forestville, District Heights, Capitol Heights, Seat Pleasant and Clinton. The four-room building was bought last fall by Charles Nelson, on whose farm it stands.

Several Inquiries Ordered in Wreck

more than twice the number who died only nine months ago and only 10 miles away on the same line at suburban Rockville Centre. The toll then was 33 dead and 125 injured—the State's worst until last night.

A motorman in that collision was tried on second degree manslaughter charges, and acquitted.

Sullivan questioned the surviving motorman of last night's crash, William Murphy, 61, at length following the accident but did not disclose what he had learned. The motorman of the second train died at his controls.

Sullivan said today he would resume his investigation Friday, when other inquiries are expected to get under way.

The grim affair last night occurred this way:

Two outbound 12-car commuter trains, loaded to the aisles with home-bound city workers, sped through the moonlight in residential Kew Gardens, Queens.

One slowed or made a stop—it is not clear which. The other hurtled along close behind.

The motorman of the second train skidded his wheels nearly 1000 feet, but it was too late.

His lead car, with a flash from the electrified power parts, roared into the rear coach of the first train, held helpless on the track by what the surviving motorman termed faulty brakes. The motorman of the second train died with many of his passengers.

Acting Mayor Sharkey, standing at the floodlit, bloody scene, said:

"It's time we find out why these things happen so often on this particular line. It's a crime. If public ownership is the answer, that's it."

Effective immediately, Sharkey ordered the Long Island to keep within 25 miles per hour on its New York City tracks. He estimated the second train last night was doing 40 to 45.

The bankrupt Long Island, owned by the huge Pennsylvania Railroad, but out of its control in receivership, pointed out, however, that it had carried 2,300,000,000 riders without a passenger death in the 24 years before Rockville Centre.

Millions of dollars in damage suits are expected to be filed against the line. Similar suits are still pending from last February's crash.

Impellitteri's statement, announced here by his aides, called for strict new safeguards on the busy road, which carries 300,000 commuters every day from Manhattan to the pretty suburbs that dot western Long Island.

"The main purpose of public carriers is to provide safe transportation for our people," the Mayor said.

"Sometimes false economy creates conditions that lead to terrible disasters. I am determined that the Long Island Railroad shall operate—within the limits of the City of New York at least—with all the necessary automatic safeguards, no matter what the cost shall be."

He asked New Yorkers to pray Sunday for the dead and injured.

The precise cause of the disaster is still uncertain, but the railroad reviewed the situation that may have faced the two motormen.

The first train, the 6:09 p. m. bound for Hempstead, N. Y., was running 90 seconds late. It either slowed sharply or made an unaccustomed stop as it neared the Jamaica station.

When Motorman William Murphy, 61, tried to pick up speed again, his powerful air brakes failed to release.

In the rear, Brakeman Bertrand Biggam had—as his duty called—dropped to the track, waving his red electric lantern, with the train's own red warning lights above his head.

But when he heard the power go on, he jumped back aboard, as was proper—but then the brakes held.

He heard a train coming "but I thought it was on another track."

Before he could jump down again and signal a warning, he saw the speeding 6:13 "coming like the devil . . . right down the same track."

He was hurled the length of the car to safety. But behind him, Motorman Benjamin Pokorny, 55, rode to his death in a slaughterhouse of passengers. Standing in his motorman's box in the very front of his train, he was the first to be torn to pieces and his was one of the last bodies picked from the wreck.

Signal Status In Doubt

The railroad said it could not say at this time what track signal light was showing. A spokesman said it would take a full investigation to determine whether the block signal showed "go ahead," "caution," or whether Pokorny ran a full-stop signal like the engineer in the Rockville Centre crash.

In any case, the Long Island said, there were the red warning lights of the 6:09, and—until he jumped back aboard—Biggam's swinging red lantern.

The Long Island boasts one of the most modern block signal systems in the world. But except for tunnel stretches it has lights only, with no automatic brake trippers in operation as on the New York City subways.

Thus it is up to the engineer to stop the train if the signal orders—it will not be done for him automatically if he fails.

"Trippers" Removed

Once, a decade ago, the railroad had the automatic trippers. But it said they were "impractical" and often caused injurious false stops and following general railroad practice, they were removed.

The two trains were 4 minutes apart at the Pennsylvania Station start, but because of 6:09's delay this had dropped to only about 2½ minutes at the time the brakes grabbed.

While very close, such narrow headway is not exceptional on New York's teeming subway and commuter lines.

At the instant of impact, the high-voltage third-rail short circuited with a blinding arc flash and an explosion that mingled with the collision roar.

Pokorny's car went through and over the other train's rear coach like a bullet going through a gun, shredding humanity, steel, mohair chair seats and glass into a dripping, tangled mass. For hours, the scene was a horror of several hands, bodiless heads, and odd arms and legs.

Of the injured, about a dozen are in critical condition and might die, 40 more were in serious condition, 99 were treated at hospitals and sent home, and 181 others received first aid at the wreck scene.

Thanksgiving Is Day of Grief At Queens Hospital Morgue

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Friends and relatives of victims of the Long Island train wreck spent a grim, grief-filled Thanksgiving today in a somber parade through a morgue to identify the dead.

Some entered weeping hysterically, some walked as if in a hypnotic trance. Two priests stood by to console the bereaved.

A few thanked God when they learned loved ones were not in the morgue at Queens General Hospital.

Four men who had been playing cards when the crash occurred lay in the morgue still clutching cards. Some of the dead held cigarettes and cigars.

Many of those who had come to identify bodies stopped at the threshold and offered a prayer before they entered.

Louis Bayer came to identify the body of his son-in-law, Herbert Hyman.

"He was coming home from business with presents for his two children who are 6 and 12. He was going to pick up his family and come to my home for dinner. We were waiting for them when we got the news from his wife, my daughter Pearl."

Bayer broke down, sobbing.

"Thanksgiving has been a double celebration for us every year. It's also our wedding anniversary," he said.

Pair Finally Gets Married After Obtaining 6 Licenses

BALTIMORE, Nov. 23 (AP).—"It's about time," declared Violet Bull today after her marriage.

She might well say it. She and Sylvan Carter had taken out six licenses to wed in the past 11 weeks before they used one. They ripped up the others one by one.

"She'd get mad, then I'd get mad," said the 22-year-old bridegroom.

They got the sixth license yesterday after going through considerable red tape. An original and four duplicates are supposed to be the limit in Baltimore.

The couple went off with the license last night to get married.

"I don't take much stock in it," the 18-year-old gril's mother said.

But they finally did get married. As to their feuding, the newlywed girl figured "it's because of the Irish in both of us."

Bankers Serve as Good Bridge Between Snyder and McCabe

By J. A. Livingston

By a happy circumstance, a dozen influential bankers attended a quarterly meeting of the Federal Advisory Council at the Federal Advisory Council at the Federal Reserve Board here this week. A few of them found time to drop in at the Treasury. They were able, in an informal way, to mediate the dispute between the Treasury and the Reserve Board on interest rates.

Livingston

The timing was propitious. On December 15, the Treasury must meet a maturity of $2,635,000,000 1½% bonds, and on January 1 $5,373,000,000 1⅛% certificates of indebtedness. Here then was the chance for the Treasury to make a gesture—to indicate by its new financing that it is not unalterably opposed to the Reserve Board's effort to curb inflation by raising the price of money.

A salty banker likened the Reserve Board-Treasury crisis to what happened aboard a ship pulling out of port in a squall. The first mate rushed up to the captain and said, "Sir, I think we ought to drop anchor 'til it blows over."

The captain barked: "You operate your end aft and I'll operate mine for'd."

The captain ordered full steam ahead, the mate dropped anchor, and the ship lunged forward to a halt that almost pulled it apart.

"You can't," observed this banker, "operate a money system, any more than a ship, with the master and mate running in opposite directions." Who's master and who's mate—Secretary of the Treasury Snyder or Reserve Board Chairman McCabe, if either—remains to be seen.

Among the members of the Advisory Council at the meeting were Edward E. Brown, chairman of the First National Bank of Chicago, who is president of the council, and Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the Riggs National Bank, who is vice president. Both are members of the Government Borrowing Committee of the American Bankers Association, which consults with the Treasury on its financial plans—that is, presents the bankers' views.

Bankers were particularly anxious to avoid a repetition of August 18, when the Treasury flouted the Reserve Board and vice versa. The Treasury announced a new issue of $13,570,000,000 13-month 1¼% notes at the very hour the Reserve Board announced an increase in its rediscount rate from 1½% to 1¾%. The Reserve was trying to raise the cost of money while Snyder was dropping anchor, trying to keep interest rates fast in place. No go!

At that time, the Reserve Board was hoping Snyder would offer an intermediate issue of bonds—something ranging from five to seven years. Many bankers were interested in just such an issue too. They'd like to buy higher-interest medium-term bonds. But that would have cost Snyder 1¼% interest versus the 1¼% rate he had decided on. Snyder felt he did not want to change rates—in view of Korea. He wanted to maintain a fixed pattern of rates. He didn't want uncertainty in the market by a change in policy. Not when he couldn't estimate his future financing needs.

But the Reserve Board wanted uncertainty. It wanted to raise interest rates. It wanted to make bankers and borrowers unsure of whether money would be plentiful and cheap. In that way banks might be less anxious to lend and borrowers more cautious about borrowing. So the Reserve wanted to change the pattern.

Out of that came head-on conflict. The Treasury financed with 1¼ percent notes—as previously. But the Reserve gradually lowered its buying price on Treasury short-term securities—bills, certificates, and notes. It altered the rate despite Snyder. Today Snyder will have to pay 1½ percent instead of 1¼ percent for one-year money. That's the market the Reserve Board has set.

Snyder might have tried to finance the $8 billion maturities with short-term obligations. But that would have been a redeclaration of open conflict with the Reserve. In going to a five-year 1¾ percent Treasury note, and announcing it well in advance of expectations, Snyder made a generous gesture toward McCabe. He made it clear that the captain and the mate again were on the same boat.

Two Doctors Outstanding in Rescue Work

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP).—Amid all frantic rescue efforts in the Long Island Railroad wreck last night, the work of two young doctors was outstanding.

They are Dr. Arnold Robert Sanders, 30, an assistant resident at the Queens General Hospital, and Dr. Paul E. Soffer, 26, one of the hospital's senior internes.

They are credited with saving the lives of up to two-thirds of the survivors of the two terribly telescoped cars in the wreck that killed 77 and injured 332.

On Duty at Hospital

Both were on duty at the hospital, about a mile and a quarter from the disaster scene in residential Kew Gardens, Queens, when the alarm came at 6:30 p. m.

Dr. Sanders was sent out as squad leader of the hospital disaster team, and Dr. Soffer was one of his aides. With about 12 other doctors they raced to the tracks and plunged into the hideous rescue work.

In front of them were the two fused cars—filled, in the most literal fashion, with severed hands, dismembered bodies, stray arms and legs and the lolling heads of the dead and crushed. Blood trickled down the sides of the cars and oozed from the narrow gap where the shattered hulk of one lay atop the wreck of the other.

Inside that gap, tangled in twisted seats, broken glass and crumpled plate steel, were two score or more injured. Some were too far gone to save by any means, but some could live if help came sure and fast.

Work Under Lights

While Dr. Sanders set up the teamwork and laid out the aid station, Dr. Soffer, carrying tourniquets and morphine, wormed his way into the gruesome crevice, helped by the flare of police floodlights.

A few minutes later Dr. Sanders followed him in.

They occasionally called for splints, for blood plasma, for more morphine, and now and then for a tug or a heave to help free an injured man.

One by one, most of the maimed were removed. Contrary to earlier reports, not a single amputation was performed on a living person to free him.

"It's better to cut steel than bodies when a man is trapped like that," said their supervisor, Dr. Jack Ruthberg.

For 4½ hours the two young men toiled in the ghastly steel coffin until all were free who were alive.

Then two railroad cranes wrenched the cars apart and the rescue crews went in after the mangled bodies.

$5000 Damage Caused by Fire In Warehouse

Fire yesterday caused damage estimated at $5000 to a warehouse and its contents at 4801 Rhode Island ave., Hyattsville, Md.

The warehouse, operated by the Eckington Transfer Co., was gutted and furniture valued at $3000 damaged by flames.

Cause of the fire, Fire Chief William Anderson of Hyattsville Fire Department said, was believed to be an explosion of coal gas in a coal heating stove.

Traffic was blocked on Rhode Island ave. for more than two hours and was detoured by Prince Georges County police.

you'll find a big difference when you ride on chair-height seats

ARE YOU A DADDY LONGLEGS? Do you feel like a jackknife when you sit on a seat that's too low?

WERE YOU THE STAR FULLBACK? Do you get all doubled up when you don't have room enough to sit up comfortably?

THEN PLYMOUTH'S FOR YOU—everyone else too—with roominess and natural posture Chair-Height Seats.

. . . another reason why Plymouth owners are in a class by themselves!

The average Plymouth passenger gets comfort-plus, sits 12% higher than the average passenger in lowest-priced Car A, 16% higher than the average in lowest-priced Car B! This means:

MORE KNEE ROOM!
Plymouth seats tuck right up under your knees, keep you at natural sitting level. This full support adds greatly to your comfort.

MORE EYE ROOM!
Plymouth seats give all a deeper view of the passing scene, give the driver a closer view of the road in front of the car.

MORE LEG ROOM!
Rear seat passengers have a full inch more leg room than in Car A, 3½" more than in Car B. Front seat passengers have up to 2" more than in Car A, 1¼" more than in Car B.

MORE FOOT ROOM!
Rear seat passengers have almost 2" more vertical foot room under the front seat than in Car A, and a full 3" more than in Car B.

MORE CHEST ROOM!
Whether the seat is adjusted forward or backward, the driver of a Plymouth has more clearance than he would have in either Car A or Car B.

MORE HEAD ROOM!
In a Plymouth, driver and passengers enjoy almost 2" more head room than in Car A, and half an inch more than in Car B.

MORE SHOULDER ROOM
when entering or leaving a Plymouth! Rear door swings 12" wider than in Car A, 10" wider than in Car B. Both door openings are nearly 3" higher than in Car A, more than 2" higher than in Car B. No squeezing in and out.

ALSO, ONLY PLYMOUTH—in the lowest-priced field—GIVES YOU:

The matchless comfort of the AIR PILLOW RIDE. The smoothness and quietness of FLOATING POWER engine mountings which, combined with big Super-Cushion Tires and many other Plymouth exclusives, bring smiles to the miles. No wonder so many Plymouth owners say: "The next car I own will be a Plymouth, too!"

Plymouth owners are in a class by themselves in SERVICE too. Skilled technicians, enrolled in Plymouth's MASTER TECHNICIANS SERVICE CONFERENCE, are specialists in diagnosing and correcting difficulties, helping to keep your car running better, longer.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Friday Morning Quarterback:

THE PRESIDENTIAL CUP Committee pulled one out of the hat when they came up with Georgia and Texas A. & M. as the offering at Byrd Stadium on December 9, a truly face-saving trick at a time when the highly embossed invitations were seemingly going begging.

If Georgia and the Aggies are not exactly a couple of giants in the college football scene, they are at least two good football teams needing no apologists. And their contest could take on added stature by the end of the week—if A. & M. happens to knock off Texas, the Southwest Conference champs.

POVICH

In light of the vague financial guarantees which have never been stated aside from the promise of 40 percent of the receipts to each team, the committee achieved a neat trick in getting the two schools here. And the game can capitalize on Washington's high sectional feeling, with Georgians and Texans in the Capital by thousands.

A whopping factor in the agreement of the two schools to play here was the lure of a trip to the Nation's Capital for their squads. Officials of both colleges admit that. It points up again Washington's advantageous position in any bowl-game bargaining, not to be lost sight of in the competition for post-season games in the future.

DOWN AT Knoxville tomorrow, unbeaten Kentucky and Tennessee will be playing the Nation's game of the day. It is being awaited with bated breaths in Dallas, too. Tennessee has already accepted the Cotton Bowl invitation to meet Texas on New Year's Day, and a defeat by Kentucky would be embarrassing.

Paul Bryant's Kentuckians will be levelling for the Sugar Bowl bid, and the $96,000 guarantee it carries. A victory over Tennessee would make it a sureshot. The disturbing fact for Kentuckians, however, is that they haven't beaten one of Gen. Bob Neyland's teams in 19 years.

THE FOOTBALL GAME that has been a-building for two months will be played in Griffith Stadium tonight when Tech and Eastern go all out for the Interhigh Schoolboy title. For sheer ferocity and give-all that traditionally leaves the losers in tears, that is the game that carries the biggest emotional wallop.

The genus football fan is always there for the high school finale. Annually it out-draws the college games in the Stadium. Tonight's crowd may set a new record, so intense is the interest in Tech's single-wing versus Eastern's slick T-formation. With the exception of one tie, both teams romped through their other league games.

Tonight's affair offers a special attraction that may be unappreciated by Tech. If it is close, and that is the way it figures, Eastern will take the blankets off its schoolboy place-kick specialist, Dave Keys, the lad who booted his team into the championship game with a tremendous 35-yard field goal against Anacostia. Keys suits up only for his kicking chores.

GRIFFITH STADIUM this week is spilling over with local interest. Tomorrow afternoon it's Georgetown vs. George Washington, in a renewal of the football feud that had its beginning in 1890. It took G.W. 58 years to beat the Hoyas, but they have now notched two in a row.

Andy Davis, the brightest backfield star on a Washington college team in many seasons, will be leading the attack for G.W.'s single-wing. Georgetown, with its T and spread formation, will be offering Frank Mattingly as a counter-threat. Tomorrow's result will label each school's season a success or failure.

From Georgetown, there are reports of a team sadly wounded by injuries but it has been in adversity—against Miami, Boston College and Holy Cross—that the Hoyas have played their finest games. One of the Hoyas' best games could beat G.W., I'll venture, and thus a timorous vote for Georgetown.

THE WEEKEND'S local rivalry vein extends over onto the professional gridiron on Sunday, when the Redskins play the Colts from Baltimore, sometimes called a Washington suburb, if the idea is to outrage Baltimoreans.

It's a game between the pro league's two tail-enders, but not quite an unimportant one. Both teams will be out to break its lease on the cellar, with the Colts playing with a revenge motif. Their defeat by the Redskins early in the season, revealed them as the only team the Redskins could lick.

For the loser on Sunday, however, there will be some balm—if the Redskins are the losers. They'll wind up with first choice in the college draft for 1951, and thus could come by either Bob Williams of Notre Dame or Kyle Rote of S.M.U. The Colts' first draft choice is meaningless. They traded it off to the Chicago Bears before the season opened.

Lions Knock Stuffing Out of Yanks

By 28-17 Score

Steelers Mush Over Cards in Snow, 28-17

CHICAGO, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Steelers operated efficiently on a snow-blanketed field at a touchdown-per-period pace for a 28-17 National Football League win over the Chicago Cardinals before 11,622 fans today.

The Thanksgiving morn encounter started in a mild blizzard winding up under a bright sun which failed to hike the sub-20 degree temperatures at Comiskey Park.

Rusty Joe Geri, with two touchdowns and four conversions for 16 points, led the Steelers to their fifth win in 10 league starts. The defeat left the Cards with a 4-6 record and dropped them out of a fourth-place tie with the Steelers in the American Division.

The Cards trailed 28-3 until well into the fourth quarter, when Jim Hardy flipped two scoring passes.

Geri scored the first two Pittsburgh touchdowns. In the opening period, he plunged 5 yards across after George Nicksich grabbed a Frank Tripucka bobble and raced 20 to the Cardinal 5. Geri churned to 101 yards in 23 tries, by far the day's best ball-carrying.

In the second period, Geri rammed 4 yards to score, capping a 41-yard Steeler drive. A few minutes before, Geri had flipped a pass to Jerry Nuzum which covered 68 yards, but went to waste when Nuzum fumbled a play later.

The third Steeler touchdown was set up by Carl Samuelson's recovery of Hardy's fumble on the Cardinal 33. Four plays later, Nuzum slammed into paydirt from the 1. Two passes by Joe Gasparella and a 10-yard smash by Geri to the 1 did most of the work.

Steelers' High Score Mark

In the fourth period, the Steelers wrapped up their scoring with Bobby Gage's 13-yard jaunt around the Cardinal left end. Gasparella's 25-yard pass to Val Jansante had spotted the Steelers on the Card 15.

The Cards, after struggling scorelessly following Pat Harder's 18-yard field goal in the first period, counted in the fourth period on Hardy's 45-yard flip to Bob Shaw and his 22-yard shot to Fran Polsfoot. Harder converted after both scores.

It was the Steelers' highest point-production of the season.

Steeler scoring: Touchdowns—Geri (2), Nuzum, Gage. Conversions—Geri (4) (placements).

Knicks Have It Easy With Caps, 109-78

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—Sweetwater Clifton's basket at the final buzzer gave the New York Knickerbockers a new local scoring high as they walloped the Washington Caps, 109-78, before 7000 fans tonight.

After the Knicks broke a 30-30 tie during the second period they went on a scoring spree and it was no contest.

Only in the first quarter and part of the second were the Caps able to keep anywhere near close to the Knicks. Washington scored 24 points in the first 12 minutes but was only able to own a one-point lead at that.

After that, the home team got rolling, outscoring the Caps by 31 points in the final three periods. They made 30 points in the third quarter and finished up with a 31-point spree.

Indianapolis, 92; Syracuse, 85.

Boston 94, Tri-City 78

BOSTON, Nov. 23 (AP).—The largest gathering of the season, 9600 fans tonight saw the Boston Celtics continue at the peak of the National Basketball Association eastern division as they turned back the Tri-Cities Blackhawks 94-78 at Boston Garden.

Olympians 92, Syracuse 85

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP). Holding the upper hand all the way, the Indianapolis Olympians handed Syracuse its first home-floor defeat of the NBA season tonight, 92 to 85, before a crowd of 7033.

Philly 89, Rochester 71

Philadelphia, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Philadelphia Warriors trounced the Rochester Royals, 89-71, in a national basketball association game before 5,154 fans tonight. Joe Fulks was the pace maker with 24 points as the Warriors won their sixth straight home victory. The Royals have not won a road game.

Bobby Layne Busy Boy in 49-14 Upset

DETROIT, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Detroit Lions stuffed themselves with seven touchdowns today as they whipped the New York Yanks, 49-14, before a Thanksgiving Day turnout of 30,206 fans.

The one-sided decision of the Detroiters just about ended the Yanks' hopes of winning a division title in the National Football League race.

The third-place Yanks now have a 6-4 record and apparently will have trouble in holding that spot against fourth-place Detroit, which has a 5-5 slate.

It was the highest score run up by the Lions this year, and the largest total they ever scored in their home pasture, Briggs Stadium.

Quarterback Bobby Layne, formerly No. 1 man in the Yanks' attack, made the holiday an unhappy one for his old teammates. He threw two touchdown passes and scored a touchdown himself to pace the Lions to their win.

The Yanks were outclassed all the way as they went down to their third NFL defeat. They beat the Detroiters, 44-21, earlier this season and were a 7-point favorite today.

The Lions struck in every way imaginable for touchdowns, with the most spectacular tallies coming on a 96-yard run from scrimmage by Halfback Bob Hoernschemeyer and a 65-yard pass play from Layne to End Cloyce Box.

It was the second triumph in five days for the Lions, who nipped the Green Bay Packers, 24-21, here Sunday to snap a four-game losing streak.

They scored in every period and climaxed their offense by banging over their final tally in the last three seconds of the game. That was on a 21-yard pass from Quarterback Fred Enke to Box.

Despite the impressive New York passing mark, the record did not show how butter-fingered the Yanks' receivers were when Ratterman was trying to pitch them back into the game.

The Yanks' humiliation was accented by the fact that they scored the fewest points they have netted all season, while giving up the most any team had gotten against them.

Doak Walker, Detroit's ace rookie halfback, shared some of the laurels with his fellow Texan, Layne, as he picked up a touchdown and kicked seven straight conversions. He averaged 11.5 yards on six rushes.

Box contributed three touchdowns, all on passes of 21, 17 and 65 yards.

Bryant Expects No Bowl Decision Until Saturday

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 23 (AP). Coach Paul Bryant of Kentucky said tonight he doesn't expect the Wildcats to make a decision on a bowl game now until after Saturday's important game with Tennessee.

"We have been talked to by bowls," the 36-year-old coach said, "but we have not accepted anything. Before we do we'll have to talk it over with the boys and let them decide where they want to play.

"Unless something happens to night—and I don't look for it now—there won't be any announcement from us until after we play Tennessee. I wouldn't call the boys together on the bowl matter on the eve of a big game."

Hill Prince, Ponder Outrun By Your Host

INGLEWOOD, Calif., Nov. 23 (AP).—Your Host, the pride of California colts, got the seasoned Ponder and Hill Prince, the Nation's champion of the 3-year-olds, on his home grounds today, and dealt out a close but decisive victory in the $35,000 Thanksgiving Day handicap.

The three hit the wire before 40,000 howling fans at Hollywood Park and it took a photo to separate the winner from the also-rans in this mile and one-sixteenth holiday feature.

Bigger Race Dec. 9

The time for the race was 1:41 4/5, just one-fifth off the track record at Hollywood, and set the stage for another bigger, longer and richer race coming up December 9, the $100,000 Hollywood Gold Cup.

For the bettors, who made Christopher T. Chenery's Hill Prince the favorite in this, his debut in the West, the winning Your Host paid $11.20, $5.40 and $3; Ponder, whose stablemates, Bewitch and Theory, were declared out before race time, paid $5.90 and $3.20, and Hill Prince, 1$2.60.

Ten horses broke from the gate, and as expected, the speedster, Star Fiddle, broke into a quick lead, and another hot colt, Valquest, soon joined him in a pace-setting duel.

Highs Tickets Selling at Record Pace

STUDENT tickets for tonight's Interhigh Football Championship Game at Griffith Stadium are selling at a record clip.

McKinley Tech, Eastern, Bell, Roosevelt and Coolidge Highs have sold out several times, but will have new batches of tickets on sale from 9 a.m. today until noon. Between them, these schools have sold 5000 tickets.

With Western, Chamberlain, Anacostia and Woodrow Wilson still unreported, it's certain that the old record of 7500 student tickets sold will be broken.

ROGER DOULINS, Pan American Airways official, who has been designated as "Mr. Average Baseball" by Arch McDonald, showed that he's interested in high school football, too. He purchased 12 tickets for tonight's Eastern-McKinley Tech championship game . . . Bob Wolff yesterday got into the spirit of the title game by buying $25 worth of tickets. Tonight at 6 p. m. on WWDC, Bob will devote his entire sports show to the game . . . Interhigh League boss Hardy Pearce is taking extra pains to determine a champion even if the game ends in a tie score. He has assigned a fifth official, John Poston, to keep track of the penetration by both teams. Each team will be given three points in the penetration scoring for advancing beyond the enemy 30-yard line, 5 beyond the 20 and 10 beyond the 10.

High-Scoring Tech Bumps Into Big Line

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Rugged Estern and high-scoring McKinley Tech move out of their schoolyards into Griffith Stadium's big-league setting tonight to fight it out for the Interhigh football championship. Kickoff time is 8:30.

The Washington Post, Touchdown Club and Board of Education are sponsoring the game, and the Quantico Marine Corps School Band and a drill team from the Marine Barracks here will add a dash of music and marching to the program.

All proceeds are earmarked for the Interhigh treasury, to be used specifically to buy much needed sports equipment.

Split T vs. Single Wing

It's Eastern's razzle-dazzle split T offense against Tech's power-laden single wing.

College scouts will be out en masse, their field glasses following such bright prospects as Tech tailbacks, Benny Colandreo and Stan Kernan, Fullback Johnny Wege and End Richie Gaskell, and Eastern's Halfbacks Danny O'Neill and Ralph Sita, Fullbacks Pat McDougall and Eddie Marr, and giant Tackles Phil Hudson and Bob Murray.

Colandreo, a flashy 155-pound passer and runner, is the Interhigh's leading scorer with nine touchdowns. Wege, a 190-pounder, has plowed for seven touchdowns and passed for six more.

O'Neill, McDougall and Marr all weigh more than 190 pounds and hit like tanks. And the size of 230-pound Murray and 240-pound Hudson will be impressive in more ways than by mere appearance.

Wilson Won Last Year

Eastern, with a line averaging 192 pounds, outweighs Tech nearly 12 pounds per man. However, Tech has a wide edge in experience with eight seniors in the starting lineup, all veterans of last year's championship game, won by Wilson, 21-20.

Tech has averaged nearly four touchdowns in its five Interhigh games. Eastern has averaged three touchdowns in seven games.

Game Not on Air

There will be NO radio or television broadcast of tonight's Interhigh Football Championship Game at Griffith Stadium.

Culmone Hikes Lead to Five

By The Associated Press

Jockey Joe Culmone widened his lead over Willie Shoemaker in their race for national riding honors by booting home five winners at Bowie yesterday while Shoemaker rode a triple at Hollywood. Culmone now leads by five, 341 to 336.

Culmone won on Fulgara, $8.60; Eva's Toy, $7.40; Sunglow, $2.60; Oats, $2.60, and Cactus Foot, $5.80. He was deprived of a sixth winner when Bold was disqualified and placed second. Shoemaker won on Cash Reward, $6.30; War Pep, $9.20, and Ricc's Regards, $12.

| Jockey | Mounts | 1sts | 2nds | 3rds |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Culmone | 1486 | 341 | 260 | 188 |

SMU Gets Sugar And Orange Bids

DALLAS, Nov. 23 (AP).—Southern Methodist has received feelers from both the Sugar and Orange bowls and will accept an invitation, if one be forthcoming, in the event the team finishes the season with victories, Athletic Director Matty Bell said today.

Sharman Out For Ten Days

Trainer George Lentz last night announced that Bill Sharman, the Washington Capitols' rookie All-American guard from the University of Southern California, will be sidelined for 10 days with a badly sprained right ankle.

Howard Loses To Lincoln in Final Minute

By Stan Anderson

Lincoln University took advantage of a Howard miscue in the final 57 seconds of play to upset Howard, 21-20, in the forty-fifth meeting between the two schools at Griffith Stadium yesterday.

A crowd of nearly 10,000 saw Howard's punter, William (Bugs) Jackson, fumble a fourth-down pass from center on the Lincoln 15-yard line, where he was smothered by End Robert Branch.

At this point Howard was ahead, 20-14. Solomon Harp bulled to the 4, then Bob Smith tossed to End Jim Cooke for a touchdown. Harry Tunnell added the important conversion.

11 Players Hurt

Howard scored on its first play from scrimmage in the savage battle which had eight men taken from the game on stretchers and three minor injuries.

The tally was a 75-yard pass play from Quarterback Hal Davidson to Capt. Roger Goodson.

The Bisons scored again in the first quarter. Goodson jaunted off 8 yards and Neverson converted.

Lincoln's first touchdown came on a 3-yard plunge by Fullback Joe Harris after a drive of 8 yards.

In the second half Howard scored first on Sammy Hotson's 11-yard run. But Lincoln tallied on a 73-yard drive to set the stage for their fourth-period rally. It was the same as their final touchdown, a pass from Bob Smith to Jim Cooke. Harry Tunnell added the point after touchdown.

It was Lincoln's second conference win against three defeats, ending its season with a five-win and four-defeat record, their worst season record since 1944.

Tech, Eastern Clash Tonight

in the championship game since 1944 and '45, both title-winning years for Coach Dick Mentzer. Before then, the only football championship won by Eastern was in 1892, the first year of the Interhigh League.

Tech is an old hand at playing in title games. It has won the crown 20 times, more than any other school, and finished second a dozen more times.

Tech has played in each of the three championship games cosponsored by The Washington Post at Griffith Stadium. In 1946, Tech lost to Coolidge, 18-6, before 18,571, the record attendance for a high school game here.

In '47, Tech beat Central, 14-7, before 16,864. There was no game in 1948. Nearly 10,000 tickets were sold for last year's 21-20 game despite a driving snowstorm.

Reiley's Long Runs Pace Fork Union to Title

Fork Union, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—Halfback Bob Reiley got off touchdown romps of 78 and 69 yards and Fullback George McDaniel ran 71 yards for a third score as Fork Union defeated Staunton Military Academy, 19 to 6, today. The win gave Fork Union its second straight Virginia Military League championship.

Pete Wedel, Thompson Pace Victors

By Bill Gilbert

George Washington High of Alexandria, which retired the Old Oaken Bucket last year with its third straight victory over Washington-Lee of Arlington, chalked up its fourth triumph in a row, 19-0, over the Little Generals yesterday at Alexandria.

STATISTICS

| George Washington | | Washington-Lee |
|---|---|---|
| 7 | First Downs | 10 |
| 7 | Passes Attempted | 27 |
| 4 | Passes Completed | 8 |
| 79 | Yards Gained Passing | 55 |

| 50 | Yards Lost, Penalties | 15 |
| 5 | Number of Punts | 5 |
| 157 | Distance of Punts | 153 |
| 31 | Punting Average | 30 |

It was the sixth victory for G. W. in the series, which began in 1928. Washington-Lee has won eight games, and two ended in ties.

A crowd of 14,500 fans saw End Pete Wedel score two touchdowns and Tailback Fordie Thompson the other. The Little Generals, getting only limited service from Ace Back Johnny Herrlein, couldn't gain through the G.W. line until late in the fourth quarter, and when Sammy Eberdt took to the air, the Presidents' strong pass defense stopped him.

The Presidents started toward their ninth win in 10 starts by marching 40 yards after W.-L. couldn't go anywhere with the kickoff.

The drive culminated when Wedel scored from 20 yards out on an end-around play and when Earl (Tubby) Dixon converted the Presidents had a 7-0 lead.

Guard Lester Scott of G. W. set up the next touchdown late in the opening period when he punted out of bounds on the General's 6-yard line.

On the first play from that point, Eberdt passed down the middle, and Thompson intercepted it, headed for the sidelines and romped 30 yards to a score. Dixon's kick hit the upright and bounded away.

G. W. Scores Again

G. W. took the second half kickoff and drove from its own 26 to the W.-L. 46, before Scott stepped back to punt.

Al Martini took Scott's punt on his 15, fumbled, and Guard Ed Mottley recovered for G. W. on the 12.

Two running plays lost 3 yards, then George Nolan found Wedel on the goal line for the touchdown. Dixon's kick was no good.

The Little Generals, who were dropping their third decision in 10 games, began clicking late in the game. They went from their own 35 to the G. W. 34 before an Eberdt pass was intercepted by Fordie Thompson. Thompson, though, fumbled, and Guard Paul Pomponio recovered for W.-L. on the G. W. 44.

Anglers Catch 'Rocks' While Avoiding Rocks

By Ralph Murdock

IT NOW APPEARS THAT the stripers will be going strong for several weeks.

At Solomon's Island a pair of fishermen spotted the "Red Sails" afloat at Bowen's Pier and seemingly just "rarin' to go fishing."

Murdock

The anglers, Norman Starkey and Eno De Buoys, did quite a selling job on Capt. Edgar Bowen and persuaded the "salty" to take them out to the Old Cedar Point Lighthouse for a fling at the rockfish.

The three were somewhat shielded from the northern blasts by the Cedar Point Naval Base, less than a quarter-mile from the lighthouse. The first circle around the rockpile which surrounds the deserted lighthouse produced four nice stripers.

Bowen said, "It was one of the roughest fishing trips I ever made—and I've made plenty. My toughest job was keeping my boat out of the rocks. We ended up with 61 rockfish."

NEWLY BRUSHED DUCK blinds of cedar and pine which adorn both sides of the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries give mute evidence that the duck hunters are ready for the opening of the duck season which starts at noon on November 27. All indications point to a very good season if the present influx of waterfowl is indicative.

TUESDAY'S northwester, which at one time reached a wind velocity of 52 miles per hour, failed to dim the enthusiasm of the anglers who journeyed to Deale, Md., and Solomon's Island.

Several fishing parties arrived at Deale at daybreak and were chagrined to find their favorite fishing boats tied up at the docks with their bows resting on the bottom of Rockhold Creek and only their sterns in the water. High winds had blown most of the water from the creek.

The situation grew more hopeless as the tide continued to ebb. The anglers, realizing their predicament, headed back to their homes.

Fishing Tips:

ROCKFISH — Solomon's Island could be the best spot—Holland Point area and Eastern Bay also good—The gulls will give you a lift in finding the fish.

WHITE PERCH—You can't beat Eastern Bay for this species.—Bloodworms are scarce.

YELLOW PERCH — Severn River is good—Live minnows should do the trick.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez announced last night that he has signed two light heavyweights for an eight-round battle at Turner's Arena next Monday night.

Clashing in the third eight round fight to be arranged will be Leroy Coleman, Patterson, N. J., and Jimmy Kid Lee, of New York.

Bladensburg Wins, 13-0

Bladensburg took advantage of a Hyattsville fumble and an intercepted pass to win its last Prince Georges County high school league football game, 13-0, yesterday at the old Byrd Stadium.

Calvin Green recovered a fumble by Hyattsville's George Baker 53 yards from the goal line in the first quarter and Bladensburg scored five plays later.

A 15-yard advance on a double lateral, John Shearer to Don Maloney to Bob Anderson, set up the scoring play on the 2. Anderson went over left tackle for the touchdown.

In the fourth quarter, Shearer picked off a pass by Hyattsville Quarterback Bill Falls and ran 47 yards for the other touchdown.

Mount Vernon Whips Fairfax For County Championship

Mount Vernon's Majors won the mythical Fairfax County High School football championship with a 28-12 victory over Fairfax in the traditional rivalry yesterday at Fairfax.

The triumph gave Mount Vernon its most successful season in history with an 8-2 record. Fairfax finished with three wins and seven defeats.

Sonny Lakey scored two touchdowns for Mount Vernon on a fumble recovery in the end zone and a pass from Eddie West on a 41-yard play. West scored himself on a 52-yard gallop.

Jimmy Darr accounted for the Majors' other score on a 55-yard end-around play in the last quarter. Jasper Lakey kicked two conversions and Bruce Jenkins blocked a punt that rolled out of the end zone for Mount Vernon's other two points.

John (Skinny) Saffer scored for Fairfax on a short plunge and passed to Terry Cannon for 31 yards and Fairfax's other touchdown.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Mount Vernon | 0 | 13 | 7 | 8 | 28 |
| Fairfax | 6 | 0 | 6 | 0 | 12 |

Fairfax scoring: Touchdowns—Saffer, Cannon.

NTS Beaten, 13-0

Slye's Florist defeated the National Training School for Boys, 13-0, yesterday at N.T.S. Gil Buckingham and Eddie Herbert scored touchdowns, and Buckingham converted.

Navy Plebes Down Bullis

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 23—A fourth-quarter gamble by Bullis Prep of Silver Spring, Md., backfired and the Little Admirals ended their season by bowing, 25-19, to the Navy Plebes here today.

With the score tied, 19-19, Bullis had the ball on its own 39, with fourth dawn and a yard to go for a first. The Admirals tried for the first, but the Plebes held and took over.

They marched to the I-yard line from where Pete Fiedler went over on a quarterback sneak.

Bob Stinac passed to Jim Byron for two Bullis touchdowns, and Leo Speros scored the other on a 3-yard plunge.

Whatever Ails the Redskins, It Isn't Morale; Spirit Still High Despite 8 Straight Lickings

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

THE REDSKINS haven't been told the facts of pro football life.

Apparently, they don't think they're out of the running for the league championship, although they've won only one of their nine games and have only three more left to play.

That was pretty obvious at Griffith Stadium yesterday as the athletes got in their licks for Sunday's battle against the Baltimore Colts, who are in the same won-loss bracket as they are.

If the Redskins' standing in the NFL's American Conference was as high as their morale, they'd be in first place, not last.

Never during the wretched season, not even during the all-conquering exhibition game march, has the team's morale been higher.

It's a combination of a miracle and a tribute to Coach Herman Ball that the club hasn't blown its top after what's happened to it Sunday after Sunday.

"I'VE NEVER seen a bunch of players who've gone through what this team has this year and still have the determination this gang has," said Ball. "You'd think the [illegible] frustrated that they [illegible] a toot what happened, but look at 'em, they're as het up as a bunch of freshmen. It beats me.

"Why last Sunday after we lost to Cleveland, somebody asked Bill Dudley what he thought of the Browns and Bill said: 'They aren't so tough. I'd like to play them again tomorrow and I think we could lick them.'"

The Redskins have two words to answer the question why their morale is so high: Herman Ball.

"He shouldn't be blamed for what's happened to us," one of the team's veterans said. "Hes not only a good coach, but a swell guy. We've been breaking our backs trying to win, epecially for Herman. He's been a prince to us. He never balls us out in front of another player, and he still treats us with consideration despite all the pressure that must be on him.

"We've been wondering why he hasn't cracked up yet."

IT'S NO SECRET that the Redskins are sold on their coach and would resent any change. President George Marshall hasn't given Herman a vote of confidence yet, and if he's looking for a reason to, he should talk with some of his employes.

They'll tell him that whatever ails the Redskins, it isn't their morale, and that's because of Ball.

IN SHORT—Sammy Baugh, the misery in his back a little better, worked out for the first time in five days yesterday. He may be available for the big clash of the tailenders Sunday. . . . Baltimore owner Abe Watner has agreed to let Tommy Mont play against the Colts but there is still no word from Cleveland's Paul Brown, who nixed the Redskins' request to use Mont last week. . . Either the Colts have improved or the Redskins have gotten worse since their September 16 meeting. The locals are 10-point favorites Sunday. They were 17-point choices for first meeting. . . Wonder what would happen to GPM if former Redskin Frank Filchock passed to former Redskin Hal Crisler for the winning touchdown for the Colts Sunday?

$10,000 Is Awarded to Tucci Horse

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

BOWIE, Nov. 23—Joe Culmone's mount, Brookmeade stable's Bold was disqualified after reaching the finish first in today's $10,000 Endurance handicap, but the sensational youngster rode five other official winners before 15,095 holiday customers, who bet $1,125,586.

The stewards' decision awarded victory to Bob Considine, owned by Joe Tucci, Washington plumbing contractor, and named for the Capital City writer, a friend since boyhood. The Brookmeade colt was placed second in the revised result.

Bold, making the third start of his career, swerved several times in the stretch run, obviously guilty of interference.

Bob Considine, trained by Claude Feltner of Berryville, Va., who started his career as a Charles Town jockey, finished three parts of a length behind Bold

Culmone failed to get in the money circle in the first race when Treplow Stable's Friar Tuck quit under him. However, he brought Mrs. W. B. Dietrich's Fulgura from far back in the pack to win the second race by six lengths at an $8.60 mutuel. Thus he put the finishing touches on a $66.40 daily double pay-off on the 1-and-4 duo.

Jolting Joe came off the pace to make it two in a row in the third. With L. J. Stephan's Eva's Toy doing the running, Culmone was widening a four and a half length lead at the end

The young Sicilian broke the odds-on Brookmeade Stable jinx by winning the fourth with Sunglow.

Culmone's presence backfired when the betting minus pools developed in both the fourth and fifth races. In the latter event, Joe was presented with the winner through forethought of Trainer Preston Burch, who "declared to win" with Oats, Culmone up.

Bill Bennings Says:

Dear Folks:

At Bowie The press box nitwit had a field day cracking wise about Jockey Willie Shoemaker. He said, "That guy acts like he has a HALF SOUL. The first thing he knows he's going to make a HEEL out of himself. I'm getting a little WORN OUT about the thing, but it looks as if we haven't heard the LAST of it and I guess we'll have to STRING along while the TONGUES are wagging. It's enough to give a fellow CORNS." Somebody swung at him or he probably would have gone on punning the rest of the afternoon. Despite only fair wagering the first part of the week, Bowie is ahead of last year in betting although behind in attendance. Cary Boshamer, all-time North Carolina U. grid star, came up to see his King Clover run in the Endurance. It was here in 1940 that he saw Odessa Frank carry his colors AT BOWIE to his first turf victory.—Bill.

Jake Roberts Runs 80 Yds. As Tulsa Wins

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 23 (AP).—Tulsa University's Golden Hurricane bowled over aggressive but erratic Arkansas with a last-half offensive today to score a 28-15 victory and establish itself as a likely bowl contender with an 8-1 record.

A crowd of 16,783 chilled fans watched Tulsa's flashy attack, frustrated through two periods, rebound after the intermission and shake loose its speedy backs for long gains.

The most spectacular was an 80-yard touchdown jaunt by Jumping Jake Roberts on the first scrimmage play of the second half. Roberts' score matched a 71-yard Arkansas drive in the second quarter that ended with a 6-yard rush by Buddy Rogers that gave the Razorbacks a 7-0 halftime lead.

The Golden Hurricane took charge following the tie score and ran up 19 points before the third period closed.

After Halfback Gene Helwig intercepted a pass by Arkansas Quarterback Larry Hogue and ran it back 25 yards to the Tulsa 41, a 26-yard run by Fullback Eddie Roberts and a 9-yard pass from Ronnie Morris to End Willie Roberts set up a second Tulsa tally. Jack Crocker dashed 6 yards for the score.

On the next kickoff, Razorback End Bill Jurney fumbled on his own 41 and in six plays Tulsa spinning over from 13 yards out, had its third touchdown, Crocker

Tulsa added a fourth-period safety when End Ray Tallent and Tackle Floyd Harrawood blocked a punt by Louis Schaufele in the end zone.

Arkansas's second touchdown was chalked up by Hoge on a 3-yard push after a Tulsa bobble started the visitors on a 36-yard march.

Runs of 39 and 15 yards by Jake Roberts set the stage for a 27-yard scoring pass, Morris to End Fred Smith, for Tulsa's final marker.

Wichita Rolls Over Nevada, 37-19 in Cold

WICHITA, Kans., Nov. 23 (AP).—The University of Wichita rolled over Nevada's Wolfpack, 37-19, before 5000 near-frozen fans today, after Niel Garrett had passed Nevada to a 13-9 halftime lead.

Garrett passes made all three Wolfpack touchdowns. Scampering Jimmy Nutter, the Shockers' All-Missouri Valley halfback, matched him with three scoring thrusts. The Shockers found their margin in a safety and two touchdown passes of their own—both caught by End Norbert Moranz.

Michaels' 25 Points Pace Scorers

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—Washington and Lee's Generals, playing with their regulars on the sidelines nearly half the game, stormed to a 67-7 victory over the University of Richmond Spiders here today for their first Southern Conference football championship since 1934.

The triumph was the sixth without defeat against league foes for Coach George Barclay's Generals.

Six thousand spectators watched Gil Bocetti, the Generals' pitchout artist, and Walt Michaels, their line-crashing fullback, lead a brilliant offensive show the first half.

Michaels was the day's big point-producer. He slammed through for three touchdowns and converted seven times from placement for 25 points as the Generals rolled up 646 yards running and passing.

Charlie Holt, who replaced Michaels at fullback, spun 17 yards for a touchdown, grabbed one of Bocetti's pitchouts and rolled 11 yards for another and closed out the day's scoring on a 46-yard pass play for a third.

Randy Broyles, a speedy sophomore, collected two tallies, taking a Bocetti pitchout and scampering 39 yards and sprinting 45 for 12 points. Bocetti hurled a pass on a play covering 49 yards to Talbott Trammell, a big rangy end, and Junior Fullback Bay Arnold tore 50 yards for other touchdowns.

Richmond avoided a whitewashing by marching 74 yards at the start of the second half. Ralph Shoemaker circled left end for the final 22 yards. Jim Sipe converted.

The Generals collected 495 yards rushing and 151 yards on their aerial game. It was the ninth game out of 10 played this season that W & L had stacked up at least 300 yards against their opponents. They got only 254 yards in a driving rain storm and mud battle with Virginia Tech.

along about sixth going down the backstretch, leaving Your Host and Johnny Longden to carry the threat to the speed burners.

Your Host collared the pacesetters at the far turn and gradually pounded into the lead as they hit the tip of the stretch. Ponder was trailing and Hill Prince began to pass horses on the outside.

The stretch run brought the real battle. Your Host, packing 124 pounds, four less than Hill Prince, refused to stop, but was under a drive to hold off Hill Prince.

Suddenly Ponder came from the rear, as usual, and from then on it was a horse race between the three, Ponder caught Hill Prince just before they hit the wire, and he almost nabbed Your Host.

This was Hill Prince's first start since he won the Jockey Club Gold Cup, beating Noor by 4 lengths, last October 7 at Belmont. Later the Chenery colt's trainer, Casey Hayes, said he thought the colt ran a good race and apparently needed a tuneup before renewing competition with a field of this brand.

Trailing the first three were Great Circle, Valquest, Blue Reading, On Trust, Frankly, Star Fiddle and Curandero.

Your Host collected $28,300 net for the win. Today's total betting pool was $2,025,815.

Wyoming Win Closes Season Without Loss

DENVER, Nov. 23 (AP).—Colorado's freezing wind made the scent of orange blossoms doubly tantalizing to the Wyoming Cowboys today as they closed out their first perfect football season by dumping the Denver Pioneers, 42-12.

Their victory over a fired-up Denver team that was shooting for an upset gave Wyoming the Skyline championship for the second straight year along with a chance for the Orange or Gator Bowl.

So intense was the rivalry between the teams that players twice were banished for fighting.

Tailback Eddie Talboom, Wyoming's choice for All-America, scored three touchdowns, passed for another and booted six conversions to boost his season's total to 130 and clinch his third straight conference scoring title.

An audience of 28,700 came out in subfreezing weather to see Wyoming win its ninth game of this season and its tenth in a row.

One Denver fumble set Wyoming up on the Denver 10, but they were stopped at the 3. Next time they got the ball, the Cowboys drove 32 yards on the ground with Talboom scoring the first touchdown on a 1-foot plunge.

The invaders nailed the decision down in the second period with two more scores. One came on a 20-yard touchdown pass from Talboom to Dewey McConnell to end a 67-yard drive. The other was on Talboom's 2-yard plunge

Little Potato To Western

Western Branch won the 90-pound championship of the Washington Boys' Club Football Conference by defeating Eastern, 14-0, in the Little Potato Bowl yesterday on the Ellipse.

In another game, Western's 80-pounders won from Eastern, 13-0, with Danny Porter and Bubby Kelliher scoring touchdowns.

Dave Wilkinson and Jeff Bakhtiar scored for Western's 90-pounders, Wilkinson on a 20-yard sweep around end, and Bakhtiar on a 3-yard buck.

Wilkinson's touchdown gave him 19 for the season and a total of 126 points. Western finished undefeated in seven games.

Joe Walcott Tests Layne

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP).—Rex Layne, a stout-hearted 22-year-old from Utah, will attempt to vault smack into the heavyweight contention tomorrow night when he tangles with crafty 36-year-old Jersey Joe Walcott in the main 10 at Madison Square Garden.

(The fight will be broadcast over WMAL, 630, and televised over WNBW, channel four, in Washington, beginning at 10 o'clock.)

On the surface, it looks like the mismatch of the year. But the stocky, former GI's calm approach to this scrap, the most important of his career, has knocked the price down from 10 to 1 to 4 to 1 and by fight time at 10 p. m. (E.S.T.), is may be as low as 3 to 1.

Brown Easy For Columbia Lions, 33-0

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 23 (AP).—Columbia University's football Lions powered and passed their way to a lopsided 33-0 victory over Brown's luckless Bruins before 8000 at Brown Field today.

Held scoreless during the first period, the Lions cut loose for two touchdowns in the second period, added another in the third and two more in the final. Brown reached Columbia's 23-yard line in the third quarter and the 4 in the fourth but lost the ball on fumbles each time.

Howard Hansen scored the first touchdown on a 1-yard buck, climaxing a 42-yard, seven-play drive in the second period. Vernon Wynott galloped 80 yards down the sidelines for the second.

Columbia carried the second half kickoff back 65 yards to a score in 16 plays. Toner scored from the four.

The Lions' final two touchdowns came in rapid order in the final quarter. They went 36 yards in six plays with Don McLean scoring on a 12-yard pass from Tracy. It was McLean's thirty-fifth catch but his first touchdown of the season.

Columbia gained possession on the ensuing kickoff when Ernie Gregorowicz recovered Jerry Zeoli's fumble at the Brown 35. On third down, Dave Salvatore sliced off right guard and scored standing up.

The triumph was Columbia's fourth against five defeats this season.

Good Horses InBurchToday

BOWIE, Nov. 23.—The parade of Thanksgiving weekend stakes continues tomorrow with the 15th running of the W. P. Burch Memorial Handicap, named for the late Washington, D. C., trainer.

Despite the East's waning seadrawn some of the topflight sprinters, the $10,000 added affair has ers. Jan Burke's Magic Words and J. L. Younghusband's Lextown share the topweight assignment with 120 pounds. Magic Words probably will be the favorite.

Eleven thoroughbreds of all ages were named overnight from a list of 26 nominations. Perhaps the only horse of importance locally stabled who did not accept is Mrs. Helen H. Reineman's Eagle River. Dion K. Kerr, jr.'s Flying Weather, winner of the Burch last year, gets in comparatively light tomorrow with 108 pounds.

As is the case with Flying Weather, Maryland fans probably will have more than lukewarm feeling for Henry H. Hecht's The Pincher. His potential speed makes him a factor in any race at six furlongs or under. He carries 118 pounds. Flying Weather, 1:11 1-5, holds the record for the Burch. The track record, however, is 1:10 3-5, set by Greenock in 1929.

Missouri, Freezing Weather Numb Favored Kansas, 20-6

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 23 (AP).—The Missouri Tigers and freezing weather numbed the favored Kansas Jayhawks with a 20-to-6 upset today in their traditional Big Seven Conference football battle.

Playing on a frozen gridiron, the 14-point underdog Missourians shot ahead 4 minutes and 35 seconds after the struggle started and never gave up the lead.

Halfback Ed Stephens scored two of the touchdowns and Big Bill Houston, the Tiger fullback, added another.

Kansas scored its sole six-pointer late in the first period as Wade Stinson sliced 4 yards off right tackle. Fox Cashell's try for the conversion was to the left of the goal posts and Kansas was through scoring for the day.

Missouri started only four men today who opened the season in a 0-34 loss to Clemson. Today's triumph gave them third place in the Big Seven race with three victories, two losses and one tie. Kansas clinched fourth place with three wins and three defeats.

The Kansas touchdown followed a Missouri fumble and a Kansas recovery. Stinson pounced on a Missouri fumble four yards from the goal line. Stinson went over his own right tackle for the marker.

Houston scored Missouri's second touchdown early in the second quarter from the one-foot mark. The Tigers closed out the scoring in the third period as Stephens sliced over from about two yards out.

Coley Passes To 4 Scores As VMI Wins

ROANOKE, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—Virginia Military Institute's Keydets, sparked by Quarterback Jimmy Coley, scored in every period today to rout Virginia Tech, 27-0, and pile up the largest margin ever achieved by a Keydet eleven in the 46 years of military series.

A Thanksgiving Day crowd of 25,000 saw the clash—the ninth consecutive loss of the season for winless Virginia Tech.

Coley, a slim senior from El Dorado, Ark., passed to End Neal Petree for a tuochdown to climax a 76-yard drive the first time VMI got the ball. He tossed another socring aerial to Fullback Joe Stump in the second period, clicked with End Bill Leck for a third at the start of the third quarter, and then completed the rout with a final touchdown heave to Halfback Freddie Anson midway the final period.

The four touchdown passes were only a small part of the total offensive effort of the Keydet quarterback. He ran 10 times from scrimmage for a net gain of 22 yards and completed 12 passes out of 20 for a net yardage of 140 yards through the air.

Billl Graf kicked three extra points for the Keydets.

Sweeping Changes In Personnel Policy Reviewed in Series

(This is the first of several columns on the recent and sweeping changes in the Civil Service system.)

A short five months ago, in the latter part of June, the average Federal employe was becoming increasingly concerned over the possible loss of his job. After many economy threats, it appeared that Congress would sharply reduce Federal employment by as much as 200,000 jobs.

South Korea was then invaded. American troops were sent to Korea with other United Nations forces. The Federal employe picture began to change drastically. These changes have been made so rapidly and abruptly that the average employe hasn't been able to keep pace with them.

In this series we'll try to report these changes and explain them.

By mid-July the military agencies began to expand. More civilians were needed to man supply depots, to overhaul ships, to make munitions, and to participate in scores of other activities to support the fighting in Korea. In the last four months the Army, Navy and Air Force has hired nearly 200,000 additional civilian employes. And many more will be hired.

Faced with an enormous rebuilding task, the Civil Service agreed to allow the military agencies to hire on an "emergency" basis critically-needed employes who weren't available on Civil Service registers. Up to now, about 150,000 persons have been given "emergency" jobs in the defense agencies.

When it became clear the Government would expand instead of reduce, members of the House Appropriations Committee started a debate on how Government personnel actions should be handled for the duration.

Representative Jamie Whitten (D., Miss.) recalled that during World War II many employes had been given multiple grade promotions and he felt that veterans hadn't been given adequate consideration for the higher grade jobs.

Whitten's views were summed up in a rider which the appropriations committee approved for a supplemental budget bill.

Since that time Federal employes have been wondering what has hit them. The rider and its effect on Federal employes and their jobs has been bewildering and confusing. Tens of thousands of employes today, two months after its enactment, still don't know where they stand under it. The rider is of such importance that it's being quoted here in full as follows:

"In making appointments in the Government service, the Civil Service Commission shall make full use of its authority to make temporary appointments in order to prevent increases in the number of permanent personnel, and no employe in the Federal Civil Service promoted, transferred, or appointed to a position of a higher grade shall be eligible, in event of separation from the service through reduction in force, to reinstatement at a grade above the grade held by such employe on September 1, 1950; and all reinstatements, transfers or promotions to positions in the Federal Civil Service shall be temporary, and for positions subject to the Classification Act of 1949 shall be made with the condition and notice to the individual reinstated, transferred or promoted that the classification grade of the position is subject to post-audit and correction by the appropriate departmental or agency personnel office or the Civil Service Commission.

"The names of all persons to be terminated under reductions in force in the departments and agencies shall be certified as eligible for appointment to positions in agencies determined by the President to be related directly to national defense, i qualified, at not to exceed the grade and salary last held in the terminating agency; and the Defense Department is authorized to call on other departments and agencies for such additional personnel as it may require within the limits of its fund."

Happy Modern Pilgrims Give Thanks . . .

SYNAGOGUE SCENE—While the Rabbi said grace at yesterday's Thanksgiving dinner for 25 descendants of Judah, natives of many countries, Piva, Elias and 1-year-old Moisze Piorko each had a different reaction to the first such feast for them. They have been in America for six weeks and live at 3701 13th st. nw. The dinner was served in the dining hall of Beth El Synagogue, 702 Jefferson st. nw.

THEIR FIRST ONE—Rosa Dina, 3, and Arie, 4, in this country less than a year, are awed by the giant turkey prepared for the 25 DPs by the National Council of Jewish Women. Before the meal, Rabbi M. H. Levinson explained, in Yiddish, the meaning of Thanksgiving to Americans These are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Schwartz of 11 R st. ne.

25 DPs Celebrate Thanksgiving in Synagogue

By John Gregory
Post Reporter

" . . . She . . . bare a son; and she said, 'Now will I praise the Lord'; therefore she called his name Judah." Verse 35, Chapter 29, Genesis.

And on Thanksgiving Day, 1950; 25 descendants of Judah, natives of many countries, gathered in the dining hall of a Washington Synagogue again to praise the Lord.

There were many blessings. There was a bountiful dinner, the first Thanksgiving dinner for any of the 25 in their new home, America. For many there was the blessing of watching as their wide-eyed children gazed in awe at their first turkey.

As Rabbi M. H. Levinson, of Beth El Synagogue, 702 Jefferson st. nw., explained the history of America's Thanksgiving, using the common bond of the Yiddish tongue, the 25 listened intently.

They had much in common with the first celebrants of the day, the Pilgrims.

These 25, too, had come from Europe. They came as displaced persons, displaced by a war, displaced because of a religion.

The Washington section of the National Council of Jewish Women and the Jewish Social Service Agency brought them together at the Thanksgiving table at the second annual dinner for displaced persons in Washington.

They came from Germany, from Poland, Latvia, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Hungary. They were of many ages and professions. But the faces betrayed common experiences of which no one spoke.

The young Slovak photographer smiled at his family—wife, a boy, 4, and a girl, 3, while the Rabbi said: "Thanksgiving is especially significant to you of the Jewish faith recently arrived here."

The photographer's children, during their first year here, had become acquainted with the ice cream, candy, tricycle and streetcar America. Yesterday they learned about Thanksgiving.

"For the name of our faith comes from Judah, who was the fourth son of Jacob and Leah. And Leah named her fourth son after the Hebrew word for 'thanks.'"

A quiet, dark man in his fifties touched the long scar on his cheek and looked at his plate while the Rabbi talked.

Perhaps he remembered the days before the war when he was a prominent German businessman. Or the days of the war that brought the visible and invisible scar. On this Thanksgiving Day he could review a year of new life.

His Washington employer thought he was an excellent stock clerk, and had raised his pay. There was reason to give thanks this year.

Then the Rabbi sat down and dinner began. A Polish family and an Italian family, sitting across from each other, shyly began to test their common knowledge of a new language, English.

Soon the two families were eating and laughing across the table and the days of slave labor, concentration camps, war and death were forgotten at Thanksgiving Dinner, 1950, U. S. A.

Park Theater Named for C. T. Barron

The open air theater in Rock Creek Park from now on will be known as the Carter T. Barron Amphitheater.

The naming was announced by Secretary of Interior Oscar Chapman after a White House conference with President Truman. A formal dedication is planned for next spring.

Barron, Washington civic leader and sparkplug of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission, which built the theater, died November 16.

Chapman said that "it is fitting that the amphitheater which is the keystone of the Sesquicentennial celebration be named in honor of Carter T. Barron, who more than any other person, was responsible for its construction.

"President Truman discussed the matter with me and declared that, because of Mr. Barron's great contributions to the Sesquicentennial and because of his other outstanding activities in behalf of the Capital community, it is fitting that a permanent memorial be established in his honor."

Since the amphitheater, built with $563,500 of sesqui funds, is located on land controlled by the Interior Department, Chapman had the authority to select its formal name. Although called the Sesqui Amphitheater this past year it never was formally named.

Chapman said civic, theater, Government and other leaders would be invited to participate in the dedication next spring. He said he hoped a marker will be erected near the theater entrance.

The 4000-seat open air theater was built primarily for the Paul Green sesqui symphonic drama, "Faith of Our Fathers." Barron, up to his death, had tried to persuade the sesqui commission, of which he was executive vice chairman, to put the show on again next spring. But the commission put off a decision until its December meeting.

Melvin D. Hildreth, local attorney and Democratic National Committeeman for the District, who was named to succeed Barron on the commission, has said he strongly favors another season for the drama.

Errant Dog Worries This Young Lady

Cassie is a brown and white setter that might have some trouble understanding just what is the trouble.

But if Cassie again sees Karen Franck, who is 18 months old and lives at 1848 Irving st. nw., the trouble will be over.

Cassie isn't Karen's dog but was a welcome guest. Cassie's owners, Mr. and Mrs. Ettinghausen, of Herndon, Va. (He is an official of the Freer Gallery) are spending a year in the Near East.

Karen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter G. Franck, agreed to take care of Cassie. Then Cassie ran away, November 8. Mrs. Franck called Cassie's veterinary to get the dog's license number. She was told that some other person had called a short time before to learn who the owner was.

Now whoever has Cassie knows the owners are the Ettinghausens, and that their phone has been disconnected. The Francks know Cassie must be in good hands, but where?

Nurse Burned When Bed Catches Fire

A 37-year-old nurse suffered first, second and third-degree burns of the face, neck and hands when her bed caught fire early yesterday.

The injured woman, Mrs. Adele Legeti of 604 Nicholson st. nw., was taken to Emergency Hospital. Her condition was reported as fair.

Firemen said the 12:33 a.m. fire in the basement apartment may have been caused by a lighted cigarette.

About 20 minutes later, a two-alarm fire in a rooming house at 1228 15th st. nw. drove eight persons into the street, some of them fleeing by fire escape.

None of them was injured in the fire, which completely burned out a fourth-floor room, but was kept from spreading by firemen.

Charles Daly, an occupant of the room, said he turned in a box alarm after being awakened by smoke.

Arlington GOP Drafts School Fund Petition

The Arlington County Republican Committee yesterday announced it will petition for a special election to authorize the borrowing of $3,515,000 for new county school construction.

In a formal resolution adopted Tuesday, the committee agreed to circulate petitions asking the Arlington Circuit Court to hold the referendum.

The GOP bond proposal would provide:

1. Toward construction of a new joint junior-senior high school for Arlington, to accommodate 2000 pupils—$2,200,000.

2. Toward two new elementary schools for 700 pupils, three additions handling 375 students, and for the remodeling of 12 present buildings—$1,315,000.

The Republican plan amounted to a pared-down version of a proposed $7,450,000 bond issue sought by the Arlington School Board in the November 7 election. It was defeated by 380 votes.

In building what the resolution called "show" schools in the past, the Arlington School Board has been "singularly unmindful of the will of the majority" of county voters, the Republicans said.

The GOP resolution, drafted by the committee's civic affairs group, estimated the total cost of the new schools and additions at $4,315,000.

The report, however, anticipated a $500,000 net increase in taxes available to the school board in 1951 for construction purposes, plus $300,000 more expected from State school-aid funds.

Arlington's need, the report said, is "to build basically good, permanent schools at moderate cost."

In its report the executive committee said the school board's $7,450,000 bond issue failed at the polls because "a majority of people" felt the board "has not properly handled previous construction funds."

Report figures whittled down the school board's $3,500,000 estimate for construction of the junior-senior high to $2,700,000; cut the number of proposed new elementary schools from three to two, as against the board's six.

The GOP report completely eliminated these expenditures proposed in the school board's bond issue; $430,000 for purchase of sites for future schools; $640,000 to replace two elementary schools with new buildings, and $300,000 to provide additional space in existing schools.

DPs Skilled in Factory Work Now Sought

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

Before Korea, displaced persons with farming background were in the greatest demand in this country. Today the "new emphasis" is on skilled factory workers from Europe's DP camps.

The DP chief has supervised the entry of 193,127 "new pilgrims" since passage of the DP act in July 1948.

Washington has become the adopted home of 701 refugees. Maryland has taken in 4944, and Virginia has become home to 3553 of Europe's homeless.

Another 1310 DP's arrived in New York yesterday aboard an International Refugee Organization-chartered ship. Five of the new arrivals will come to District families.

So great is the demand for skilled mechanical workers, said Carusi, that regional conferences are being held in several industrial areas throughout the country.

The conferences, first of which was held last week at Milwaukee, are meetings of labor and industry representatives with state displaced persons committees to coordinate the requests for defense industry workers.

"Fortunately, skilled DP's previously had been in the least demand," said Carusi, "and I would guess there are some 40,000 qualified DP's in Europe who have the skills needed here.

A restrictive provision in the original DP Act—directing that at least 30 percent of all DP's must be farmers—is the principal reason why agricultural workers have flocked to the United States, while skilled workers had been kept to a minimum.

On the whole, Carusi thinks the European refugee problem and this country's part in solving it tell a commendable story.

The 193,127 displaced persons admitted thus far, plus some 20,000 who have received visas or are en route to the United States, represent more than two thirds of the total this country is authorized to bring here.

Europe's DP population has been whittled from about 1,250,000 in 1945 to 260,000 today. The United States, Great Britain, Canada and Australia are the largest recipient nations.

The IRO now feels certain, Carusi reports that almost all of the 250,000 still homeless persons will be resettled by October 1951, when the organziation is slated to disband.

But in this group there are about 25,000 real heartaches for resettlement officials. They are the so-called institutional cases—blind persons, those suffering tuberculosis and other chronically ill persons.

Great Britain has begun taking tubercular D.P.'s, and Norway is resettling some blind persons. This group is barred from the United States on two counts. The D. P. act sets up strict health standards. It also stipulates that the D. P. must be able to earn his livelihood.

According to Carusi, the I.R.O. is considering a plan whereby it will furnish a contingency fund to each nation for the support of all handicapped D.P.'s.

Pair Arrested on Street in Housebreakings At Two Churches and Adelbert Lee's Office

Police, seeking to break up a series of housebreakings, early yesterday morning arrested two men believed to be connected with "jobs" at two churches and the real estate office of a school board member during the night.

Held on $5000 bond each for action by the United States Commissioner, on charges of housebreaking, are: William Russell (Country) Carpenter, 47, of Unionville, Va., a mechanic, and Hampton Ray Lackey, 34, a printer whose address police gave as 833 5th st. ne.

Both men have records as safe crackers, Detective Sergt. Irving Lubore said.

Carpenter, who is out on $4000 bail on a housebreaking and larceny charge in connection with the theft last June 16 of $1182 in cash and 91 bottles of whisky from the Del-Gree Liquor Store, 2701 12th st. ne., has a record dating back to the early '20s, when he was known to police as a rum runner.

Lackey was charged with housebreaking last April when he and Richard R. (Tex) Baker, an underworld character and once prosperous restaurant operator, were picked up in connection with two safe jobs in the 500 block of K street nw. Lackey was freed, however, when Baker told the jury he had been operating alone.

They were being questioned yesterday, and denied knowledge of:

A safecracking job at Mount Carmel Baptist Church, 3d and I sts. nw., from which between $600 and $700 was taken, according to the Rev. William H. Jernagin, pastor. The church was entered through an unlocked side window by burglars who blew the 3x3x2-foot safe in the third-floor office.

The ransacking of Ryland Methodist Church, Branch ave. and S st. se., by persons who jimmied a back door. The Rev. Melvin E. Lederer, pastor, said apparently nothing was taken. There is no safe at the church and no money is kept there, he said.

The forcing open of a safe with heavy tools in the real estate office of Adelbert W. Lee at 3211 Pennsylvania ave. se., after entry had been secured by forcing open a window in the rear of the office. The safe, weighing from 800 to 1000 pounds, was rolled into the middle of the floor and the door jimmied open. Nothing appeared to have been taken from the safe.

Carpenter was arrested in the 2200 block of Branch ave. se., by Detective G. B. Colbert of the Eleventh Precinct.

Colbert said he stopped Carpenter because "anyone coming from between houses at that hour should be questioned," and then recognized him as "a safeman."

Lackey was picked up on Branch ave. a few minutes later by Detective Charles T. Connor, one of eight policemen working in the neighborhood on a volunteer basis in an effort to end the housebreakings.

Connor, cruising with a partner, drove up to Lackey as he walked along the sidewalk, and hailed him. Lackey looked at the policemen and walked away, Connor said.

Being overtaken again, Lackey attempted to ignore the policemen a second time.

When Connor told him that he wanted to talk to him, Lackey put his hand on an object — later found to be a flashlight — in his pocket. Connor then put his hand on his shoulder holster, and Lackey began to talk.

He refused to give his name, but said he was going out to get a hamburger, in Maryland. Connor, remembering Maryland was about 3 miles away, asked him what time he thought it was.

When Lackey said "about 11:30," Connor arrested him.

Population Missing Key To District Master Plan

U. S. Employment, Dispersal Ideas Pose Questions Hard to Answer

"People set the scale of the comprehensive plan," declares the National Capital Park and Planning Commission in its 30-year master plan for Washington. Yet estimating Washington's future population is perhaps the toughest planning job of all.

The biggest unknown is, of course, the future employment policies here of the Federal Government. And, along with it, the question of whether these employes are soon to be dispersed in part to various sections of the nearby Maryland and Virginia countryside.

In drawing up the master plan last spring, the planners figured metropolitan Washington in mid-1948 had 1,400,000 residents—860,000 inside the District and 540,000 outside in the areas making up the metropolitan district.

In working out a blueprint stretching to 1980, the planning body reported that "best judgments available to the commission, based on expected employment trends, forecast a 1980 population for the Washington metropolitan region of two million. The District of Columbia itself should level off at about one million, for this is as large a number as the District can provide for in the land area available, at density standards that will assure good living conditions."

But the dispersal program, if it goes through, may very well mean Washington's population may never go much above the 800,000 mark, and, in fact, may even drop somewhat. On the other hand, the metropolitan area might grow to 1,500,000 by 1980 instead of to only a million. Or choose your own figure.

The planners figured that their 1980 estimates will mean homes for 600,000 more people—"about one new dwelling for every two that exist today."

The wartime peak overall Government employment figure here was about 300,000 civilians and something like 40,000 in uniform. Today's total for the Washington area is at least 100,000 less. But a few days ago a Government official was talking about 300,000 civilian workers in the area in the near future. The difference, if the dispersal plan goes through, would be that practically all the additional 100,000 would end up in suburban offices. (Not the 100,000 new people, but 100,000 out of the total, some new, some present employes moved out from downtown.)

As the planners point out, "the present pattern of job locations is highly concentrated," with 84 percent of all jobs (as of 1947) inside the District and only nine percent in Virginia and seven percent in Maryland. The past three years have changed these figures somewhat, but nothing like a dispersal program would do.

Each new Government employe "means five to seven additional people in the metropolitan region—his family, and the family of the service workers whose jobs he creates by being a new customer."

In the NCPPC's map of "proposed 1980 distribution" of employment more than 30,000 additional workers are shown for the District in the East Capitol st. area. However, the plan's text (prepared later than the map) says only that "new Federal and other public and semipublic buildings requiring central locations could be placed along East Capitol st., as recommended by this commission some years ago."

The East Capitol st. plan, requiring the multi-million dollar acquisition and clearing of over 50 city blocks now filled with private buildings, has never been favored by the District government planners. The National Security Resources Board's policy of not adding new employment centers downtown because of the civil defense problem now appears to have killed the idea for good.

Since there is as yet no serious move to abandon Washington as the national capital because of the atomic bomb threat, the logical expectation is that the city sooner or later will be spread into the suburbs by dispersal of Government agencies.

The NCPPC master plan, worked up before the dispersal program was announced, called for locating additional Government buildings in Maryland and Virginia for traffic and other reasons), but no farther out, with some expectations, than 10 to 15 miles from the White House.

The dispersal proposal, as presented to Congress last September, however, called for an eventual 10 building sites within a 10-mile wide belt at 20 to 30 miles from the White House. A 25-mile circle goes almost to the northwest corner of Montgomery County, Md., and to the southeast corner of Prince Georges County, includes all of Fairfax County and chunks of both Loudon and Prince William counties, Va.

Driver Slaps Hornet, Four in Auto Injured

Four persons were injured, one perhaps seriously, when a motorist struck at a hornet that flew into his face yesterday, causing him to run into another car.

Claiborne B. Morton, jr., 20, of McLean, Va., who was driving his father's car, suffered injuries to his right knee as the result of the accident in front of 3608 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Morton's grandmother, Mrs. Mary Hickman, 76, of 3900 A st. nw., suffered possible fractures of the wrist and hip; his aunt, Sallie P. Jenkins, 80, of the A st. address, suffered contusions; and his father, 48, also of McLean, abrasions. All four were taken to Garfield Memorial Hospital, where Mrs. Hickman remained.

Morton, in striking at the hornet, struck a parked car belonging to Seawall R. Turner, causing an estimated $100 damage, according to police. Damage to the Morton car was estimated at about $200.

Two persons were taken to Casualty Hospital after a two-car collision at 17th and M sts. ne., about 8:05 a. m. yesterday.

Othel Lamp, 56, of 1825 A st. se., driver of one car, was treated for a fractured left shoulder.

Mathew Ellis, 35, 2109 Maryland ave. ne., a passenger in the car driven by Hugh Mason, 30, of 1122 21st st. ne., suffered a possible skull fracture.

In another accident, David Wong, 30, of Cleveland, Ohio, and two passengers in his car, Frances O'Brien, 29, and Gail Chin, 27, both of 8 Girard st. ne., suffered knee injuries when Wong's car and one driven by Wiliam E. Collins, 31, of 1352 Congress st. se., collided at Third st. and Indiana ave. nw., near police headquarters yesterday.

Wong and his passengers were treated at Casualty Hospital.

Fred Gichner To Celebrate His Birthday

More than 1000 persons, including business and civic leaders, will help Fred S. Gichner celebrate his 80th birthday at a reception in the Mayflower Hotel at 6 p. m. Saturday.

Gichner

The reception in his honor is being given by his associates at the Fred C. Gichner Iron Works at 24th and M sts. nw., of which Gichner is the president and founder.

Born in Austria, Gichner learned his craft in Vienna, took it to Baltimore and later brought it to Washington, where he began his climb in a one-man shop in the downtown area.

Still active in his business, Gichner is an authority on metal art works of all kinds, a stamp collector, and engaged in a wide variety of civic and philanthropic enterprises.

On the eve of his 80th birthday, the head of the largest enterprise of its kind in this area is still not content to run his business by remote control.

He reports to his office daily, but he is as likely to be found ranging over the several plants, inspecting, checking, devising new and improved methods, supervising the installation of equipment, and keeping an eye on the plants' future needs.

As the country entered World War II, Gichner quickly converted from his delicate craft to manufacturing war materials for the services. The company won several "E" awards for its efforts.

Ever looking forward, Gichner approaches the future of America with firm optimism.

"None who has seen this land as I have through all these years, wonderful for all of their difficulties and problems, can have any doubt as to its future," he says. "For the spirit that made us great will sustain us in the years which lie ahead."

Boys Marooned On River Island Miss Dinners

Two boys were marooned on Roosevelt Island yesterday and missed their Thanksgiving dinner. One of them summed it up like this:

"We were going to have duck at our house but I don't know what I'm going to get now."

The boys are Virgil Franklin, 13, of 1342 Columbia rd. nw., and Robert Burrows, 11, of 1368 Columbia rd. nw. They walked on rocks across the river below Key Bridge to the island on a fishing expedition at low tide, about 1:30 p. m. yesterday. When the tide rose, they had no way of getting across the river.

Harbor police rescued them at about 5:30 p. m. after Virgil's brother, Earl, 11, became worried and notified Park Police.

Cuthbertson Reburial Rites Set for Today in Arlington

Reburial services for Lieut. Col. Harry B. Cuthbertson, 55, who died in service on December 12, 1945, in Paris, will be held today.

Col. Cuthbertson

Colonel Cuthbertson was a liaison officer in the United States Signal Corps. His body was recently returned from its burial site outside Paris.

He was the son of Dr. Charles W. Cuthbertson, retired dental surgeon of 2206 Evarts st. ne.

Masonic services will be held at 2 p. m. in Arlington Cemetery, where Colonel Cuthbertson will be buried beside his mother, who died October 1, 1950.

Assigned to overseas duty in March, 1942, Colonel Cuthbertson was in charge of technical work with the Signal Corps in London and Paris. He traveled extensively on tours of inspection, directing the photographing of many war scenes and German atrocities. Injuries sustained during such travels were given as the cause of his death. He was the recipient of the Bronze Star, French Croix de Guerre with Silver Star and a French decoration for his engineering contributions.

One of the pioneers in developing television, he worked with Dumont and Bell Telephone companies in planning Paramount's original high-speed film-developing equipment used for large-screen theater television, before he was sent overseas. For 16 years he was technical director at Paramount News Studios in New York City. He also planned and directed the building and operation of the original portable field sound-recording equipment for Paramount sound news.

Colonel Cuthbertson was born in Washington, and attended McKinley High School and George Washington University. He received an electrical engineering degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. During World War I, he was assistant engineer superintendent of Virginia Ship Yards, Alexandria.

He was a past noble grand of local Eastern Lodge No. 7, IOOF, and was a member of the McKendree Methodist Church here.

Besides Dr. Cuthbertson, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Renee Cuthbertson, a native of Paris, who still resides there; a sister, Mrs. Marie Nold Jorgenson, and a brother-in-law, Andrew Jorgenson, both of the Evarts st. address.

Rev. Roberts, Alexandria Pastor, Dies

The Rev. Norman Roberts, 59, pastor of Alexandria's Methodist Protestant Church at 110 N. Washington st. for 20 years, died yesterday at Alexandria Hospital after an illness of 10 months.

Rev. Roberts

Mr. Roberts, who lived at 506 Queen st., Alexandria, had been president of the 79-year-old Columbia Fire Engine Company No. 4 in the city for 26 years.

Born in Alexandria and a member of an old Alexandria family, he was educated in the city's schools and later worked as a bookkeeper for the Mutual Ice Co. there.

He educated himself for the ministry and about 1930 became the pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, a post he held until illness forced him to retire last January. The church is more than 120 years old.

Mr. Roberts was a thirty-second degree Mason and a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, with World War I service with the A. E. F.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Edith E. Roberts, and two children, Joseph W. Roberts and Mrs. Margaret Dawson, both of the Queen st. address and two sisters, Mrs. Norma Enoch of 508 Queen st. and Mrs. Robert L. Wright of 517 Queen st., and three brothers, Leslie and Harry Roberts of the latter address and Caleb Roberts of Herbert Springs, Va.

Chanters to Sing

The Chevy Chase Chanters, a male chorus of 35 voices directed by J. Horace Smithey, will present a program of sacred and secular songs at Columbia Hall of the Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, Md., at 8 p. m. Saturday. Earle Ferguson will be accompanist. The Chanters have been active for 25 years.

Mrs. Hardigg Funeral Today In Arlington

SALISBURY, Md., Nov. 23 (AP).—Mrs. Alberta R. Regester Hardigg, former newspaper and magazine writer, died here yesterday.

The daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Eldridge V. Regester, she was born in Baltimore in 1889. Her grandfather, Dr. Samuel Regester, was president of the old Maryland Agricultural College at College Park.

She was educated at the Alexandria (Va.) High School and at George Washington University.

She is survived by two children, Eldridge V. Regester of Front Royal, Va., and Miss Anne J. Hardigg of Salisbury.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 3:30 p. m. in Arlington National Cemetery.

Miss Laura Embrey Dies in Sarasota

Miss Laura Embrey of Sarasota, Fla., a former Government worker in the District, died Wednesday night in Sarasota, according to word received here yesterday.

Miss Embrey, a native of Bealeton, Va., came to Washington 39 years ago and made her home here until retiring from the Department of Agriculture in 1946. She is survived by five sisters and brothers, including Mrs. Winston Clayton of Arlington, Va., and C. W. Embrey of Lovingston, Va.

Unfortunates Appeal in Desperation to UCS, Are Sent to Chest Agency Best Able to Help

Referral Service Aids Aged, Evicted, Broken Families

They come on foot, or hobbling on crutches, or led by friends.

They march up the steps at 1101 M st. nw and take the first door to the right. Sooner or later, they all ask the same question: "Where can I get help? Where can I turn?"

These are desperate people. Their problems, to them, are the most important thing in the world. It is a matter of great urgency that makes an individual desert his own privacy and throw himself on the mercy of his neighbors.

Not Charity, but Help

To Mrs. Ruth Willis, director of the Information and Referral Services, these people pour out their desperate stories:

A little old lady who lived alone. She got about with difficulty, on crutches. It was hard for her to get up and down the steps from her rooming house. She didn't want charity, she said proudly. But if there could be some way that she could get a little neighborly help . . . What she wanted was someone to do her shopping, once a week, and carry the heavy groceries home. Someone who would be willing to bring her books—good books—to read. She got so tired of reading cheap magazines. She had just enough money to live on—all her friends and family were dead.

A desperate man—a really desperate man. He and his wife had been having trouble and they hadn't found a place to live big enough for their five children. He got discouraged and walked out on his wife, found a room. His wife, unable to support the children without working, turned the tables. That very afternoon, he said, his wife had brought their five children to his room and left them with him. What was he to do? All the children were under 10 years of age. One was an infant in arms. What was he to do?

Loses Food Check Funds

A woman on public assistance from the Board of Public Welfare. She had got her monthly check for food and cashed it. Somehow, as she was waiting for service in a store, her money disappeared. She didn't know who had taken it. She couldn't ask the Board of Public Welfare to reissue the check. How was she to eat for a month? What about her other expenses? What was she to do?

A Public Health Nurse who came in on her own time. She had run across a case of a boy who was seriously retarded mentally. But she had faith the boy would imprrove if he could just get some mental therapy. And his family wouldn't take the case seriously. What could she do? How could some one help the boy?

The three sweet old ladies who for years had traveled over the country, stopping here and there if a place struck their fancy. They came to Washington and decided they'd like to spend the rest of their lives here. Is there an old ladies' home that would care for them? Where can they go, with very limited funds?

The people, dozens of them, who appear on the day they are to be evicted and ask for some kind of housing—any kind of housing. They are coming in increasing numbers these days, as old properties are being demolished.

Problems—all kind of problems—you name it. Mrs. Willis listens, and then she tells the people where they may go. There are 334 nonprofit agencies in Washington, one of which may be able to lend these people a helping hand. More than a third of these agencies are supported by the Community Chest, now in its annual fall campaign for funds.

The service that Mrs. Willis directs is a part of the United Community Services, affiliated with the Community Chest Federation. But Mrs. Willis doesn't see every person in Washington who needs help. Many of them go directly to an agency and ask for some kind of aid. She sees the ones who don't know where to go.

She doesn't know what happens to these people after they leave her office. She is afraid that the staffs of Washington agencies aren't big enough to help all of the people who need some kind of community support in the Nation's Capital and its environs each year.

If the Community Chest campaign succeeds this year, Washingtonians can be confident that the people who ask, "Where can I get help? Where can I turn?" will receive assurance that neighborliness has not become a lost art.

Every Little Girl Wants A New Doll

By Alleis C. Wilson

One of the pleasantest scenes associated with Christmas and the gifts under the tree is a little girl with a new doll to mother and to love. The variety of dolls on the shelves of toy stores now will enable you to select just the right one for the little girl you know.

Dolls this year are more or less divided into two groups — those that do something and those that are just for cuddling and loving. Among the latter, you will find chubby infant dolls, little girl dolls, teen-age type dolls and sophisticated lady dolls.

One that would certainly please a very young mother is a lightweight "baby," wrapped in a warm blanket and looking for all the world like the newest occupant of a hospital nursery. A small Bye-Lo baby is priced at $4.50. (Woodward & Lothrop). A similiar doll is $3.98 at Neisner's. A larger baby is Baby Charming in a pretty yellow organdy dress and bonnet. (G. C. Murphy—$6.95).

ANOTHER FAVORITE among tiny mothers is a Sleepy Head doll who curls up, fast asleep, wherever she is dropped. An older child may be less interested in this one since her eyes do not open. (Kann's—$2.95 and $4.95). Sleepy Heads are either blonde or brunette in pink or blue plush.

THE LITTLE GIRL dolls include nearly all the stiff-bodied dolls. Here you will find a large group of character dolls, dressed in all kinds of outfits. Some of the smallest of these are the dolls less than 6 inches tall and dressed like characters from nursery rhymes, books and songs. These dolls are usually boxed with cellophane covers to protect them for their collector-owners. Your purse will determine the type you select since they are priced upward from less than $1. (Woolworth's—79c).

An undressed doll this size (Neisner's—59c) could be dressed in several costumes by any one who sews even a little.

Another undressed doll is the large infant. (The Hecht Co.—$7.95.) There is still time to sew a fairly complete outfit for this doll, or it could be dressed in children's ready-to-wear clothing.

THE EFFANBEE DOLL CO. manufactures a portrait series of dolls. These are dolls to be played with, rather than collected, and they are dressed in many different costumes. (Play Center, Inc.—$5.95.)

"Little Women" dolls dressed to represent Meg, Jo, Amy, Beth, and their "Marme" could have stepped right out of Miss Alcott's novel. They wear full-skirted dresses varied to suit the character's personality. (F. A. O. Schwartz—$8.95 each.)

Among the most timely dolls are "Mary Martins." These dolls, with short lamb's wool hair, are patterned after the star of "South Pacific." These dolls would please a more wordly little lady who has some knowledge of Broadway. The dolls are in costumes like the ones Miss Martin wears on the stage. (The Hecht Co.—$11.95.)

BRIDE DOLLS draw "ohs" and "ahs" from most little girls. A demure bride in white satin is pretty enough to grace any middle aisle. (Woodward & Lothrop—$14.95.)

And for dolls that are real "characters," the Play Center has some imported from Spain. Their expressions are refreshing. One dressed as a surgeon and another dressed as a lab technician are particularly good. They would please a doll collector. ($7.95).

Danish Diplomat Weds in New York

Miss Alette Moltke, daughter of Count and Countess Harald Moltke of Copenhagen, Denmark, was married November 22 to Bent Ahlefeldt-Laurvig of New York and Washington. The bridegroom, who is the son of Count and Countess C. W. Ahlefeldt-Laurvig of Eriksholm, Denmark, is the Financial Counsellor of the Danish Embassy. The ceremony took place in Our Savior Church, Brooklyn, the Rev. Povl H. Baagoe officiating.

Parties Ahead Promise Festive Social Season

ANOTHER DEBUTANTE has been added to this season's group. She's Miss Rose Hildreth Bullard, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Dexter Means Bullard of Rockville, who will be presented to society at a tea dance on December 27 at the Chevy Chase Club. Miss Bullard is a sophomore at Goucher College.

The Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Roijen will be guests of honor at a reception on Tuesday, November 28, at 5:30 at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Fay on Edgevale terrace. Hosts will be the chairman and board of directors of the Netherlands-America Foundation.

MR. AND MRS. MORRIS CAFRITZ will entertain at cocktails on Monday, November 27, when a number of guests will be from Congress, which reconvenes on that day.

Mrs. Angela Jurdak Khoury, third secretary at the Lebanese Legation, gave a small tea November 20 for Mrs. Habid Badr, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Malik, wife of the Lebanese Minister. Mrs. Malik and Mrs. El-Khouri, wife of the Syrian Minister, were among the guests. Mrs. George Tomeh and Mrs Majid Khadduri presided at the tea table.

Woman Introduced Her Elderly Brother and His Wife To a Glamorous Middle-Aged Divorcee Two Years Ago; Now Triangle Has Evolved and Wife Threatens Murder

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two years ago I introduced an old friend of mine, a glamorous middle-aged twice divorced woman, to my eldest brother Bud and his wife Minna. Bud and Minna are sixtyish and have been married 35 years. They have a daughter and grandchildren, and they've worked hard and been happy together, acquiring their home and about fifty thousand dollars.

A year ago, the friend—I'll call her Kate—wrote me that she and my brother were in love. A little later my niece wrote that her mother was very ill with stomach ulcers, caused by worry. Finally Minna wrote what I feared—that Bud was seeing Kate daily. I stopped writing to Kate, but did nothing else.

Last June we visited Bud's home and I asked him if he were in love with Kate. He said he wasn't and that he wouldn't leave his wife. But I hear from Minna that he sees Kate every day.

NOW MINNA writes me that she is at the end of her rope; that she has enough evidence on Bud to hate him, but she still loves him and wants him to remain her husband. She writes me that if Bud leaves her she will kill the other woman, Bud and herself.

I realize now that Kate has thrown everything to the winds and means to hold Bud with her sexual charms. I have reason to believe he is on the verge of leaving Minna, who has continued to prepare his meals and has tried to ignore the affair to avoid his rage. What can I do to prevent a tragedy? I can't get the problem off my mind.

R. G.

DEAR R. G.: "There is no fool like an old fool," you know, a saying coined to describe elderly men trying to recapture the sensations of youth, or the illusion of youthful vigor—as an antidote to fear of death—in sexual dalliance with a designing younger woman. And if Bud has no inner strengths of character—derived from mature social sense, and from inbred allegiance to Christian concepts of duty and decency—that would keep him loyal to Minna, when greatly tempted by Kate's unscrupulous play, then there's nothing tactical you can do to save the marriage or prevent tragedy, as the case may be.

However, if you have faith in prayer, and if you can arrange with one or two "believing" friends or relatives to pray together for a special intention—namely, to reclaim Bud from this evil passion—you might set in motion moral forces to heal the trouble, by means that you could not foresee.

IT SEEMS TO ME that Minna's morbid psychology offers a prime example of how to make a bad matter worse. If Bud is weak, Minna is more so. Indeed her threat to kill the other woman, Bud and herself if he leaves her is a shocking admission of moral bankruptcy. It signifies a vicious selfishness just as evil as Kate's unscrupulosity. And as for her stomach ulcers caused by worry,—medical research finds this ailment is common to passive dependent individuals who want other persons to solve their problems for them.

Essentially Minna and Kate are much alike; each has leechlike need of a man. It is cowardice, not magnanimous fidelity, that keeps Minna from acting the fury in this crisis. Thus the only help for her is prayer, too, and she should join you in prayer, and in spirit pray unceasingly, for deliverance from her own fear and hate, which are her real adversaries in the present setup.

Eleanor Tydings, Susan Bassett Bow to Society as Debut Season Opens

By Marie McNair

THANKSGIVING DAY, which traditionally opens Washington's winter debutante season, introduced two of the 1950-51 group yesterday.

At a tea at the Sulgrave Club, winsome Eleanor Tydings, blonde and dimpled, was presented by her parents, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, and her grandmother, Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Bassett in Chevy Chase, their daughter, pretty Susan Bassett, made her bow to society just as did her sister Betsy on Thanksgiving Day two years ago.

Then, last night many of the season's debs wound up a happy day at the Debutante Cotillion and Thangsgiving Ball at the Shoreham Hotel.

GUESTS at Miss Tydings' debut included several hundred friends and contemporaries of her parents and her grandmother, and only the closest of the debutante's friends. Eleanor will have a brilliant ball given for her on December 27 at the Mayflower Hotel when her grandfather, Joseph E. Davies, and Mrs. Davies, will join with Senator and Mrs. Tydings to be hosts.

Meanwhile Eleanor will make her bow at the Bachelors' Cotillion on December 4 in Baltimore, then will go to New York with her parents on December 16 for Mrs. Howell Howard's dinner dance at the Park Lane for her debutante daughter, Linn.

Standing with her parents and Mrs. Davies yesterday, Miss Tydings wore an off-shoulder white tulle frock with velvet roses spilling down the side of the bouffant skirt. She held a round bouquet of white carnations and gardenias. Mrs. Tydings' period gown of navy blue taffeta was covered with lace of a darker shade and like her mother she wore white orchids. Mrs. Davies chose black crepe with tulle bands on the sleeves and skirt embroidered in jet.

MRS. ROBERT GROSJEAN, aunt of the debutante, was here from New York and was among those taking a turn at the tea table. Others who assisted were Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador; Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; Lady Welch, Mme. de Kauffmann, wife of the Danish Ambassador; Mrs. George Marshall, wife of the Secretary of Defense; Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. John Eager, Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. Davies Fitch, Mrs. T. T. Ansberry, Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, Mrs. B. B. Jones, Mrs. J. Harring Covington and Mrs. Carlos del Mar.

Susan Bassett, who's a student at Sweet Briar, welcomed the guests with her mother, the debutante in bouffant white net sprinkled with rhinestones, the skirt dipping from ankle length in front to floor length at the back. She wore an heirloom necklace of seed pearls and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of deep toned pansies and lilies of the valley.

MRS. BASSETT wore a navy blue tissue taffeta frock with an orchid fastened to her shoulder.

At the tea table in turn were Mrs. Eberhart Haynes, Mrs. Charles Wellborn, jr., Mrs. C. Elmore Cropley and Mrs. Cleveland Newton of Philadelphia, formerly of Washington.

Assisting the debutante were her sister, Miss Betsy Bassett, Miss Harriet Robinson of West Hartford, Conn., her roommate at Sweet Briar; Miss Hilary Hoover, Miss Elinor Kenney, Miss Mary Florence Kern, Miss Elizabeth Owens, Miss Patricia Purcell, Miss Nancy Yesair, Miss Frances Haynes and Miss Maria Somari.

DEBUTANTES of this year in white gowns, their arms filled with red roses, and debs of last season, wearing black gowns, danced at the first Debutante Cotillion, of which Miss Mary-Stuart Price was chairman.

In the receiving line with Miss Price and the ball's sponsors were Miss Tydings, Miss Sarah Alexander, Miss Caro Butler, Miss Jane McAtee and Miss Sue Anne Rouse, all of whom made their debuts during the "little season" in June. The winter season's debutantes receiving were Miss [illegible]ard, Miss Rose Caudle, [illegible]onstance Cosway, Miss Barbara Cranston, Miss Margaret [illegible]mes, Miss Nancy Graham Kear, Miss Martha Murray Myers of Concord, N. C., visiting Miss Caudle; Miss Bette-Barron Smith, Miss Elizabeth C. Wetherell, Miss Elizabeth MacCubbin, Miss Mary Ann Robb.

SOME OF last season's girls who attended were Miss Elizabeth Boysen, Miss Kathryn Early Holmes, Miss Betsy Goodloe Porter (who danced the cotillion figure with her father, Paul Porter), Miss Yardley Minnix, Miss Joyce Ebel, Miss Janeth Lloyd, the Misses Sue and Helen Walker; Miss Elizabeth MacGowan and Miss Carol Cunningham.

PAUL C. DANIELS, United States representative to the Organization of American States, entertained yesterday at a 6 to 8 reception honoring the newly elected chairman of the council of the OAS, Ambassador Hildebrande Occioly of Brazil, and the new vice chairman, Ambassador Rene Lepervanche Parparcen of Venezuela.

Tonsils Can Wait–Book Comes First

THE SUBJECT: RUTH

(First day of Ruth's beauty program)

By Ann Lawrence

A LITTLE BOY rushed up to a woman autographing books at Kann's Department Store last week.

"Today's Saturday and I was supposed to have my tonsils out today but I told my Mommy that I had to see you today and ask if you would autograph my book and she said all right, I could have my tonsils out the very next Saturday, and here I am," he finished breathlessly.

Author Marguerite Henry smiled, for "it's words like these that wash away all the hard work of putting a book together." And it's the children with their wholehearted enthusiasm that have attracted Marguerite Henry's literary efforts, she explains.

AT FIRST Mrs. Henry, who lives in Wayne, Ill., wrote magazine articles and stories. But after the appearance of her first juvenile book in 1940, she knew that was the kind of writing she liked best. She has written over 30 books for children, including "King of the Wind," which won the 1949 Newberry award.

"Children want to believe, and they DO believe," she says. The vast number of children who read her books and write fan-letters to her characters she considers a part of her family.

Her newest book, "Born to Trot," she calls the "most exciting one of all." In the past she has drawn her characters from around the eighteenth century. Her latest book features characters that are alive today and about whose experiences she has written. Before she wrote the book, she went on the "grand circuit" herself so she could better understand harness racing.

"HE'S THE TOP artist of the country," Mrs. Henry says of Wesley Dennis who illustrates her books. Mr. Dennis, who now lives near Warrenton, Va., finds country life and subjects his real interest—especially horses.

The combination of Marguerite Henry, writer, and Wesley Dennis, illustrator, is the reason Mrs. Henry's characters receive so much fan mail.

Announce Daughter's Birth

Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Matthews, jr., of West Hyattsville, Md., announce the birth of a daughter, Cornelia Anne, November 17 at Prince Georges General Hospital, Cheverly, Md. Mrs. Matthews is the former Miss Ruth Hastings, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Walter Hastings of Cambridge, Md.

"MY GREATEST fear," said attractive Mrs. Ruth Harvey, "is of looking older than my husband.

"We're the same age—thirty. He's slightly built and retains his youthful good looks. What can I do to keep myself young and attractive?"

A challenging statement, surely, for any beauty consultant.

Yet, Ruth, by her simple statement of fact, had shown herself willing to spend the mental and physical effort needed to make, or keep, herself alert, attractive and appealing.

"MY NATURALLY blonde hair can stand a bit of brightening," her letter continued. "I have light eyebrows and lashes and a mouth which I strive to change with lipstick. I don't believe I do a very good job of it.

"My height is 5 feet 3½ inches and my weight is 132 pounds."

By much dieting, Ruth has recently reduced from 150 to 132 pounds, she reported. And although she tried a few exereises to flatten the tummy and tone her muscles, the process seemed so slow that she became discouraged.

Ruth has two young boys, aged five-and-a-half and three. And since she does all her own housework, her day's schedule does not leave much time to devote to herself.

ADDED HANDICAP to an easily-followed routine is the fact that her husband, who works with the Civil Aeronautics Association, changes his working hours every two days. There's an eight-to-four shift for two days; followed by a four-to-midnight, followed by a midnight-to-eight. Not a program most conducive to an orderly, regularly-scheduled household.

But with the determination to make herself more attractive and to hold the natural good looks with which she has been endowed, Ruth can learn to fit a program of beauty and grooming into her schedule.

In the next fourteen days, she'll learn the art of make-up, learn to enhance her lovely, large blue eyes, to re-shape her mouth to conform with and balance her rather delicate features. She'll get a new hair styling more suited to her pointed face. Her hair, now brassy in color from too much tinting, will be toned down to a soft, subtle shade.

SHE'LL LEARN exercises that can be incorporated into her housework. She'll make time for herself, despite her rigorous schedule. And she'll find that she not only looks younger, but feels better, for the program.

Maryland Home Tours Assigned Date for 1951

OPENING DAY of the fourteenth annual Maryland House and Garden Pilgrimage, which will draw thousands of visitors to Maryland's loveliest and most historic show-places, has been set for April 27, in the historic old port of Annapolis and surrounding Anne Arundel County.

There, where George Washington resigned as Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army, opening-day ceremonies for the 13-day house and garden tours will precede visits to more than 200 noted dwellings, many of which date from pre-Revolutionary times.

Mrs. Blanchard Randall, chairman of the Pilgrimage Committee, reports that since 1936, the annual Pilgrimages have been sponsored directly by the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland, with 2800 members, and have been indirectly sponsored by that organization's parent body, The National Council of State Garden Clubs, Inc., with approximately 225,000 members.

Advance information and ticket reservations can be secured by writing or telephoning the Federated Garden Clubs of Maryland, 217 Sheraton-Belvedere Hotel, Baltimore 2, Maryland. A free booklet will be distributed upon request, beginning November 20, while the supply lasts.

In addition, the official Tour Book of the Pilgrimage, complete with numerous maps, and four-color plates, together with descriptions of all the houses and gardens, will be available at $1 per copy, postpaid, beginning February 15.

Salad Oil Works Kitchen Miracles

By Josephene Simpson
For the Wesson Oil and Snowdrift People

A WOMAN HAS so many demands on her time. . . . No wonder women are looking for time-saving, work-saving ways to feed the family well.

A happy discovery as an efficient cooking helper is an old favorite—salad oil. Using clear, mild oil as a starter, a homemaker may prepare a wide variety of delectables with the greatest of ease. At modest cost, too.

Frying with salad oil is like pushing away trouble. The liquid oil pours into the skillet, so a person can tell how much to use. There is no risk of melting solid shortening only to find too much is added. The oil heats evenly, and it withstands high frying heat without breaking down.

USING VEGETABLE oil in cake making is the basis of the idea which gave us the first new type of cake in a hundred years—chiffon cake. And, of course, salad oil has been linked with salads as the chief blender for the dressing ever since these crisp, colorful, vigor-giving foods were introduced and came into their own on American tables.

COAT ROAST meats, chicken, or turkey with oil for beautiful browning and for helping to keep in the juice.

Grease casseroles, cake and baking pans (unless recipe calls for ungreased pan) with oil for even thorough coating. The food comes out nicely, none of it is wasted, and the pan washes more easily.

Oil the skins of well-scrubbed potatoes or squash before baking. This helps keep in the moisture, spreads heat evenly, and makes skin softer if you like to eat it.

Pop popcorn with the oil added at the start. It coats each kernel, helps spread heat evenly, and brings out the flavors without wilting the crisp popcorn.

Creamed Salmon on Noodle Mold
Green Salad
Apple-Pineapple Pie

CREAMED SALMON WITH NOODLE SQUARES

Noodle Mold

- 3 tablespoons dry bread crumbs
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons catsup
- ½ cup grated American cheese
- ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 7 oz. package noodles, cooked and drained

Grease an 8-inch-square pan with salad oil; sprinkle with bread crumbs. Beat eggs; add remaining ingredients in order given. Pour into prepared pan; bake in pan of hot water in moderately slow oven (325 deg. F.) about 40 minutes. Cut in squares; serve with creamed salmon.

Creamed Salmon

- 1 lb. canned salmon (separate into chunks)
- ¼ cup salad oil
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 cup sliced fresh or canned mushrooms
- ¼ cup flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 1 egg
- 1 cup sour cream

Drain salmon; reserve liquid. Discard dark skin, crush bones and add to salmon, separated into chunks. Heat salad oil in saucepan. Saute green pepper and mushrooms 10 minutes. Remove vegetables from pan; reserve. Blend flour and salt into salad oil remaining in pan; gradually add milk and salmon liquid; cook gently, stirring until thick (about 5 minutes). Beat egg slightly; gradually add small amount of hot sauce; blend well, turn back into saucepan. Add salmon, green pepper, mushrooms and sour cream. Heat thoroughly. Six or 8 servings.

APPLE-PINEAPPLE PIE

Filling

- 2/3 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons flour
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 No. 2 can crushed pineapple (let drain while preparing apples)
- 4½ cups peeled, sliced apples
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Combine sugar, cinnamon and flour; add well-drained, crushed pineapple and apples. Place in unbaked pie shell, dot with butter, cover with pie pastry, then bake.

Ask Anne

Same Carpet Color Used In Adjoining Rooms Gives Feeling of Spaciousness

DEAR ANNE:

I would like some advice on carpet colors for the dining and living rooms. These two rooms open into each other by means of an archway. The walls are presently white-coated. We plan to paint them at a much later date. In the dining room, we have a gray-finished oak suite with chair seats upholstered in green which has hues of yellow and brown. In the living room, the furniture is all of plain grays, dark green, rose, with limed oak tables, etc. I plan to use full-sized cotton rugs.

Mrs. C. M., Solomons, Md.

How about a soft green for both rooms, if the idea of having them alike appeals to you? You do accentuate the feeling of spaciousness by having carpeting alike in adjoining rooms, and it may simplify selection of a wall color later. Another idea would be to have a rug in a muted rose shade in the living room, with green in the dining room. From your description, it seems you already have so much neutral color in the room that a warm shade such as rose would add to its cheerfulness.

DEAR ANNE:

I recently moved into a new house and in my bathroom I have a black and turquoise tile floor which seems to be dingy and spotted with what might be plaster. The builders have washed it with an acid solution which seems to have been of little help. Scraping with a razor blade has not helped either. Perhaps you can tell me what might clean and brighten it.

R. S., Arlington, Va.

Try softening the spots with a mixture of 1 part muriatic acid and 10 parts water, then scrape them again with the blade. Washing with ammonia should follow to neutralize the acid. As the acid is corrosive, rubber gloves should be worn while using it.

Kathryn Bowers To Address CDA

Miss Kathryn E. Bowers will be the guest speaker at the November open house gathering of the Catholic Daughters of America, Court District of Columbia, on November 26, from 4 to 6 p. m., at the clubhouse, 2 Scott cir. nw.

Miss Bowers will speak on her impressions of Europe, gathered during the Washington Archdiocesan Pilgrimage which visited Rome and most of the countries of western Europe during the late spring and early summer of this year. Miss Bowers' series of articles appeared in The Washington Post while the pilgrimage was in progress.

If There's Any Turkey Left, Give Thanks for These Recipes

By Lucia Brown

DOES YOUR turkey look like the hull of an ancient abandoned ship this morning?

Or is there enough meat left on its bones to give tempting promise of more turkey dishes to come?

If the latter is the case, here are a few suggestions that may come in handy over the weekend. The turkey pie topped with cheese pastry will be especially attractive if you use a turkey-shaped cutter on the pastry. The "turkey valiant" is a delectable spaghetti dish, seasoned with wine, and fine for a supper party. Cornbread-topped turkey is a pie variation.

TURKEY PIE

Filling

3 tablespoons butter
5 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
Few grains pepper
2½ cups milk
1½ cups diced cooked turkey
½ cup cooked lima beans
½ cup cooked whole kernel corn

Cheese pastry

Melt butter in saucepan, blend in flour, salt, and pepper. Gradually add milk, cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add turkey, lima beans and corn. Heat. Pour into six individual casseroles and top with cheese pastry cut in turkey shapes. Bake in hot oven, 425 degrees Fahrenheit, for about 12 minutes, or until pastry is lightly browned. This serves six.

Cheese Pastry

1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1/3 cup butter
¾ cup grated cheese
2 to 3 tablespoons water

Sift together flour and salt. Cut in butter and cheese until consistency is like coarse cornmeal. Add water, mixing lightly with fork, and form into ball. Chill. Roll out and cut with round or turkey-shaped cutter.

TURKEY VALIANT

½ cup (a 4-ounce can) mushrooms
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup turkey broth or chicken bouillon, liquid
¾ cup Sauterne or Riesling table wine
½ cup evaporated milk, undiluted, or heavy cream
8 ounces thin spaghetti, cooked
2½ cups cubed, cooked turkey
½ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
¼ cup dry bread crumbs

Fry mushrooms lightly in fat on medium heat. Blend in flour and salt. Add chicken broth, the table wine, and milk. Stir until smooth. Place cooked spaghetti, turkey, and sauce in alternate layers in greased shallow baking dish, beginning and ending with spaghetti. Sprinkle mixed bread and cheese crumbs over top. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees) until cheese is melted and top well browned. If prepared ahead, and refrigerated until last minute, this will take about 30 minutes. Makes six to eight servings.

Filling

CORNBREAD-TOPPED TURKEY

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 tablespoons flour
1½ cups turkey broth
½ cup top milk or cream
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon onion salt or 1 teaspoon finely grated onion
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 cups sliced or diced cooked turkey
1 cup cooked vegetables (carrots, peas, onions, potatoes, celery, green beans or combination)

Melt the butter, add flour, and stir over low heat until blended. Add cold broth, top milk, and seasonings all at once. Cook, stirring constantly, until uniformly thickened. Stir in turkey and vegetables, then pour into a 2-quart dish. Place dish in hot oven (425 degrees), heating until bubbly, about 10 minutes, before adding cornbread topping.

Cornbread Topping

½ cup sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
2 teaspoons sugar
½ cup yellow cornmeal
2 tablespoons shortening
1 well-beaten egg
½ cup milk

Measure and sift flour, salt, baking powder, and sugar. Add cornmeal. Cut in shortening with pastry blender until mixture resembles texture of coarse cornmeal. Combine egg and milk and add to dry ingredients. Stir until just moistened. Pour cornbread batter over top of hot filling, spreading evenly. Continue baking until topping is browned, 20 to 25 minutes. This makes six servings.

TURKEY-MACARONI LOAF

1½ cups hot milk
¼ cup fat
4 eggs, well-beaten
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 cup grated cheese (¼ lb.)
2 cups diced cooked turkey
2 cups cooked macaroni
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon mono sodium glutamate (optional)

Melt fat in hot milk. Combine remaining ingredients. Pour milk and fat over mixture, stirring constantly. Pour into a 1-pound greased loaf pan. Set in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) until a knife inserted halfway between center and outside edge comes out clean, 50 to 60 minutes. Let stand in pan about 5 minutes before inverting on platter. Slice or cut in squares. Serve plain or with mushroom sauce. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

GALA BREAKFAST

Grapefruit Juice
Cereal
Shirred Eggs with Chicken Livers
Hot Biscuits — Pear Conserve
Beverage

PEAR CONSERVE

Ingredients: Grated rind of 1 lemon, ¼ cup lemon juice, 6 cups pared cored sliced pears (8 to 10 medium-to-large-size firm ripe pears), 3 cups sugar, ¼ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon ginger.

METHOD: Put lemon rind and juice in a large kettle. Add pears, sugar, cinnamon, and ginger. Stir over moderate heat until sugar is dissolved. Simmer, stirring often, for 1 to 1½ hours until conserve is a pale reddish-brown color. Makes 3 cups. Stores in covered container in refrigerator.

Foreign Students At Maryland U. Guests of Council

The nearly 200 international students from 40 countries who are enrolled at the University of Maryland were entertained November 18 by the Upper Prince Georges County Council of Church Women.

American folk games, directed by John E. Foster of University Park, Md., were interspersed with conversational mixers and American folk songs led by Miss Virginia Amoss. A group of numbers typical of their own countries was presented by several of the international students.

Donald R. Harvey of Riverdale was master of ceremonies. Mrs. W. Keith Custis, wife of the pastor of the Riverdale Presbyterian Church, was chairman of the party committee, assisted by Mrs. Edgar Beckett, First Methodist; Mrs. Elias C. Renn, Pinkney Memorial Episcopal; Mrs. Harold G. Shirk, University Methodist, and Mrs. George Burkdardt, Hyattsville Presbyterian. The party is an annual affair.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. Frederick Shenstone Pray of Berwick, Me., announces the engagement of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Dunn, to Col. J. Paul Barringer of Philadelphia and Washington.

'Macbeth'—Or Scotch on Rocks

By Richard L. Coe

"MACBETH," in a sort of Scotch on the Rocks version, has arrived at the Trans-Lux under the guidance of Orson Welles, who also essays, a word used advisedly, the title role.

The settings of this opus quite walk away with Mr. Shakespeare's words. They suggest some sort of Stone Age civilization, with the persons inhabitating them seemingly patterned on the Neanderthal Man. They and the dank caves they dwell in are quite the strangest things I've seen on the screen since "The Lost World."

Making the atmosphere the more peculiar are the closeups we are given of the performers, suggesting that the orders Director Welles gave his cameramen were: "Don't shoot until you see the whites of their eyes."

It rather pains me to have been so obsessed with Welles' stark caverns, for I admire this strange, lonely exhibitionist and I think he fundamentally had something when he conceived this abstract style and setting for the play. It does strive to give one the feel of an ancient time, of a royal line being founded in the back recesses of a craggy, individual country.

But the fact remains that it doesn't come off, is indeed more ludicrous than sensible, and the reason I think is that Welles badly needs someone who can guide his imagination. This "Macbeth" is a highly personal attempt, and had it been less so and more disciplined the trick might well have come off. It seems a real tragedy both for Welles and our screen that he is so undisciplined. Which is, after all, the first requirement of a true artist.

And so we have this 85-minute version of a play which Shakespear himself had made far shorter than his other great tragedies; the result is a mere skeleton with none of the subtle character delineation that makes the man who would be king so timelessly fascinating.

Shakespeare wrote it for a special performance before James I, the Scottish-born English King, and his visiting brother-in-law, Christian of Denmark, in 1606. Because of the scholarly James' interest in both his family and the necromancy of his northern realm, Shakespeare included both ingredients for his royal patron. And, because James had frequently fallen asleep at plays, he whittled it down into a compressed form unapproached by his other works.

In the compression, Shakespeare made Macbeth a great challenge to the actor. His changes of character from a brave, tempted man to a horror-stricken one, and, finally, a hardened, hopeless one, demand powerful subtlety of the performer.

Welles gives you none of this. There is virtually no change in the man we meet before the three witches to the one defeated by Macduff.

And Jeanette Nolan is nothing short of disastrous as Lady Macbeth. This radio actress would be expected to have at least a voice, but that is the most meager of her qualities. It is a vacuous, whining thing. This classic portrait of a wicked woman who learns that "naught's had, all's spent when our desire's got without content," becomes only a petulant, twentieth century housewife, a fault as much Welles' as her own, for she's constantly upstaged by Welles.

The cuts are naturally numerous, and I suspect that, to get any idea of the real gist of what's been going on, you'll have to be reasonably familiar with the play, into the plot of which it seems futile to stray here.

Mixed Accents

A word, however, about the voices. The picture, completed a couple of years ago and tested before limited audiences, was withdrawn after it was discovered that the Scottish burrs employed throughout made the lines unintelligible to the guinea pigs. Since then, the lines, at least many of them, have been redubbed. The result is a complexity of accents, ranging from Cromerty and Perthshire to hints of the Georgia hills and the Kansas plains. It is a mildly diverting aspect to a curiously amateurish tone.

The balance of the cast is equally individual, presumably to give Welles one more scene, Macbeth now enters Lady Macduff's castle in which her son has now become a daughter — acted by Welles' daughter Christopher. To give a hint of Christianity's coming, a holy friar is inserted and played by Alan Napier as a sort of Snake Pit fugitive. Nor is there any question that the queen died "as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands;" we watch her tumble off a handy precipice.

So, for all his imaginative design to film "Macbeth," Welles has floundered in his lack of self-discipline. Watching him sink is more pathetic than funny.

KATHARINE HEPBURN is neither ill nor in Chicago and is still scheduled to bring "As You Like It" to the Gayety this winter . . . The Theater Guild denies Walter Winchell's recent item, stating that Miss Katy is fine and doing bang-up business in Tulsa as of yesterday . . . WW also made a strange remark when he stated that John Emery of "The Relapse" and Tamara Geva of "Pride's Crossing" were the only husband-wife theater team working; Cyril Ritchard and Madge Elliott, stars of "The Relapse," have been married for years; ditto the Hartmans of "Tickets Please," and how's about Rex Harrison and Lilli Palmer of J. Van Duten's new hit, "Bell, Book and Candle?" . . . The Lunts are on tour, the McClintics in rehearsal . . . And, Walter, what's this about Connecticut Gov.-elect John Davis Lodge having played "bit parts in Shirley Temple movies"? . . . He played her pop in one picture and got feature billing.

"ALL ABOUT EVE" comes back to F st. at the Columbia tomorrow.

JUDY HOLLIDAY'S calendar this afternoon includes unveiling the Olmsted's newly received painting, "Township of Wurzburg, Bavaria," a gift of the beer town's councilmen, who've also shipped along a special tun of beer to be untapped by the star of "Born Yesterday."

SUGAR CHILE ROBINSON, that little boy whose piano technique must be the despair of teachers and the inspiration of countless young, tops a snappy Uline Arena bill Sunday night . . . Louis Armstrong and his all-stars, featuring Earl Hines, Jack Teagarden, Cozy Cole, Barney Bigard, Arvell Shaw and Velma Middletown, will be on hand as will Elliot Lawrence and his "Band of the Year." . . . Reservations at Super Music City, Super Music and Super Music Cut Rate Drugs.

IN CAPITOL'S MUSICAL: June Haver and Bill Lundigan feel as they're supposed to in "I'll Get By," the Technicolored musical at the Capitol which also stars Harry James' trumpet and Dennis Day's comic mimicry

'I'll Get By' at Capitol

Dennis Day and Song Parade Make Trite Story Palatable

A STRING of popular songs parades through "I'll Get By," at the Capitol, to make it a cheerful thing of its kind. Helping matters no end is Dennis Day.

Harry James and his trumpet get things going as only James can, playing the title tune with bouncing blares. You'll also find such old favorites as "Deep in the Heart of Texas," "There Will Never Be Another You," "McNamara's Band," "You Make Me Feel So Young," Yankee Doodle Blues" and "I've Got a Girl in Kalamazoo."

Day's role finds him as a comic, and he's grand. That neat mimicry of his comes over well, especially in "McNamara's Band," the popular radio singer tossing in an amusingly international arrangement. His likable, friendly style is well to the fore and it's a good thing for the picture.

The story is badly trite, having to do with a song-plugger who loses his job, starts his own publishing firm, runs into the usual financial difficulties, loses his girl because it appears that he's using her to get ahead, and ultimately winds up as do all heroes of Technicolored musicals.

There's no use in pointing out that the usual theme that money doesn't matter is carried to its inevitable conclusion—without it you're a hopeless mess. At the moment I'm too weary of this Hollywood nonsense to do more than warn you that "I'll Get By" is up to its pretty ears in that philosophy and that, inevitably, when the Singing Sisters go on their USO tour to the Pacific they run into a most agreeable war.

The girls are portrayed with their customary charm by June Haver and Gloria De Haven, the former still as pretty a blonde as Technicolor musicals offer, and the latter now a brunette, playing a cynical, straight-girl type. William Lundigan is the hero, a fellow who neither sings nor dances and frankly admits he's just along for the romantic ride. Thelma Ritter, who's so good in "All About Eve," has a similar, tough-talking role and winds up as a lady Marine officer who knows how to treat tough sergeants.

Day's Outstanding

A few 20th Century-Fox players put in brief appearances, but if you've dropped your popcorn you'll miss Jeanne Crain, Reginald Gardiner and Victor Mature, though Dan Dailey is alloted a bit more time to do a dance with Miles. Haver and De Haven on a Pacific island.

But the songs and Dennis Day are the strong points of this bland entertainment.

The Capitol's stage show is headlined by the amusing Buster Shaver and his effective sidekick, Olive. Frank Marlowe is the comedy monologue fellow of the week, with Luis Zingone showing you "It's Fun to Be Fooled" and the Langs acrobatically enthusiastic.—R. L. C.

'Where Danger Lives' Proves A Meller Wtihout Drama

By ORVAL HOPKINS
Post Reporter

THERE are people in the business who refer to a poor movie as a "dog." Although in tough straights for a succinct term to apply to "Where Danger Lives," now at Keith's, I would never descend to using that one.

A number of things might be said, as a matter of fact, about if not for "Where Danger Lives." For one thing, it serves to introduce on the screen a dolly named Faith Domergue, subject of one of the biggest publicity campaigns since they pumped up Primo Carnera.

Miss Domergue is reputed to be the fond object of Howard Hughes, who brought you, it says here in the ads, Jean Harlow and Jane Russell. It's pretty well accepted now, the years perhaps fogging up the facts, that Miss Harlow had it. Miss Russell is noted chiefly for a remarkable pectoral development and a husband who is a great kicker and passer.

Faith Domergue—well, I'm not the guy to try to hex a lady. Suffice it to report that this is one of the curiosest movies you'd encounter in quite a while. It's about a girl (Miss D.) married to a man some years her senior (Claude Rains—Rains seems to get himself in this fix and I must say it looks like plain carelessness). She falls in love with a young doctor and the husband is killed in a brawl she cooks up. The doctor (Robert Mitchum), having been beaned with a pair of firetongs, thinks he killed Rains and the lady persuades him to fly with her.

They head out for Mexico and Mitchum dreamily explains that he has concussion and is liable to become a paralytic any minute. Then it developes that Miss D. is mad, has been all the time, and the picture winds up with the obvious, and usual, solution.

"WHERE DANGER LIVES." RKO release produced by Irving Cummings, Jr., and Irwin Allen. Screen play by Charles Bennett from a story by Leo Rosten. Photographed by Nicholas Musuraca. Music by Roy Webb. Directed by John Farrow. At RKO Keith's.

Hearing Set Tuesday on VA Insurance Plan

By the United Press

A House Veterans Subcommittee will start hearings Tuesday in an effort to find a substitute for the National Service Life Insurance program which the Veterans Administration says has grown unwieldy.

VA has complained that the program under which millions of World War II servicemen bought insurance up to $10,000 would bog down in the event of another general mobilization.

Since the Koeran war, applications for insurance have jumped from about 50,000 a month to 157,000 in September and 258,000 in October.

Committee Chairman John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), will introduce six bills in the House Monday. They offer proposed substitutes for the program, including a $10,000 "death gratuity" or automatic payment by the Government if a serviceman is killed. Rankin has indorsed none of the six.

An American Legion spokesman said his organization will oppose abandonment of the NSLI program, and urged adoption of several amendments. One would provide automatic coverage for several months for men inducted after start of the Korean war.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars were said to favor the death gratuity plan.

Grange Backs U. N. as Best Hope of Peace

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 23 (AP).—America's best force to fight aggression and build world peace lies in the United Nations, the National Grange said today in a Thanksgiving Day session of its eighty-fourth annual meeting.

"The inability of the United Nations to agree upon all questions of policy and action is not so much a sign of inherent weakness as an indication of democratic structure," the delegates added in a resolution adopted unanimously.

The convention asked that the fact of aggression be determined by a two-thirds vote of the Assembly and that provisions be made for maintenance of an "adequate United Nations police force to stop aggression, wherever it may appear."

Terming the present world situation a conflict between communism and freedom, delegates in another resolution reminded that it is in reality a "great war of doctrines or ideas instead of one solely of military operations."

"If a global shooting war should come, it would not settle the issue," the resolution said. "While we have no right to impose our ideas on others, we do have the right and obligation to other nations to see that all are free to follow their own beliefs in their own way.

"Communism is carrying on its century-old policy of attempting to destroy all who do not accept it. It operates by infiltration and propaganda where it can, but Russia has built up the world's greatest military machine to conquer by force if need be."

As part of the United States role in world affairs, the Grange urged rebuilding of United States military forces, allocation of critical materials by compulsion if voluntary means fail, and a pay-as-you-go policy for meeting defense expenses, "by current taxes requiring an austerity program, both personal and governmental, if necessary."

Men, Motives and Morals

Two publications of national interest appeared this week. The first was a so-called objective study of the FBI by Max Lowenthal, which to this writer is nothing more nor less than a vicious one-sided attack on J. Edgar Hoover. The other publication is the official record of the testimony before the House Un-American Activities Committee of Lee Pressman, Nathan Witt, Charles Kramer, John J. Abt and the same Max Lowenthal. Pressman admitted he had been a Communist and named Abt, Kramer and Witt as members of his Commy cell. Witt, Abt and Kramer declined to testify on the constitutional grounds that it would tend to incriminate and degrade them. Lowenthal, whose testimony appears last, admitted he knew all four men, plus Alger Hiss, but denied he was a Communist.

Lowenthal's book relies heavily on selected statements about the FBI, many in the Congressional Record. The cover jacket states the book is objective. However, it fails to note that Lowenthal himself has been vigorously attacked in these words in the Cong. Record of Sept. 1st, 1950: "His skill and technic are unparalleled. He does his work, lusts and thrives on obscurity. He knows he could never accomplish what he has in the open. Americans do not like his ilk, and once his shroud of mystery is penetrated he knows his usefulness is at an end. Doors that once opened to him will be closed because no good American would care to be contaminated by his known presence. I have named this man in passing before. Today I bring him into the open and introduce Max Lowenthal. Like the Communist Party whose cause he has served so well, he operates on two levels. One is seemingly respectable; the other completely underground."

Obviously, if Max Lowenthal believes the Congressional Record is part of an objective study of J. Edgar Hoover, the jacket of his book—to be objective—ought to set forth what the Congressional Record contains about Max Lowenthal.

Congressman Dondero further stated: "Lowenthal's record is one of attack on any American institution which stands 4-square for the American way of life. He has attacked railroads, banks and a thoroughly fine American institution of B'nai B'rith as a 'bourgeois organization.' Even the cause of liberalism has felt his vengeance" . . . If the FBI is also considered an American institution, then Lowenthal has spared no names, however hallowed, in his attack. Cleverly, he does not make the charges himself. Following is a sample of his devious technique on the memory of President Theodore Roosevelt. Lowenthal says: "Newspaper articles appear, disclosing the fact that dossiers had been assembled for President Theodore Roosevelt containing information about the personal affairs of various Congressmen active in the campaign to investigate the Federal detectives. News accounts conveyed the President's intention to publicize this collection, if the Congressional investigation of Federal Secret Police were carried to the lengths of provoking him."

To this writer, that is an objectionable—and not an objective charge—that President Theodore Roosevelt was a criminal blackmailer. It comes, it must be objectively noted, from Max Lowenthal, whose own loyalty to his country has been challenged on the floor of Congress. It should also be objectively noted that even Theodore Roosevelt's bitterest opponents called him a great American.

For the FBI to be an enduring and growing conspiracy since 1908, the Attorneys-General of the United States must have been part of it. At any rate, Lowenthal lists them at the beginning of his book. By any objective standard, they are an honor roll of the American Bar. Republicans and Democrats, Protestant and Catholic, Rich and Poor, Conservative and Liberal, they are a cross-section of some of the most distinguished names in American history.

Five of them, for example, went to the United States Supreme Court. Most Americans will be revolted by an inference that Conservative Republican George Wickersham, Conservative Southern Democrat James McReynolds, New England's great Harlan Stone and Michigan's Frank Murphy as Attorneys-General, either didn't know what was going on or were part of the same expanding conspiracy. The records show, for instance, that Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, practically the American apostle of civil rights—fought as Attorney-General for a double budget for the FBI. To this writer, Max Lowenthal's book virtually and idiotically charges that all these great Americans remained quiescent or actively helped the growth of a great conspiracy against the American people.

The Congressional Record may throw some light on the reasons Lowenthal wrote the book. At least Cong. Dondero's opinion deserves mention. From the record of September 1, 1950: "In the thirties, Lowenthal concentrated upon weakening our internal security by aiding an all-out Communist attack against the Federal Bureau of Investigation in 1940. Lowenthal sent out anonymous memorandums, smearing the FBI, which fact can be attested to by many Washington newsmen, hoping to head off the FBI in its fight to protect our shores against the menace of Communism and Fascism at a time when the Nazis and Communist were allies. Lowenthal has worked dilligently and deviously, but always relentlessly, to destroy the effectiveness of the FBI in its efforts to protect our country from the emissaries of Godless communism. He has always realized the FBI is the one agency he could not penetrate or intimidate. He has long known it was one agency which blocked his efforts to completely undermine our internal security."

So, along with seven Presidents and 15 Attorneys-General of the United States, J. Edgar Hoover must consider himself as accused by inference of either allowing, permitting or furthering the growth of the FBI at the expense of the liberties of the American people. Objective history appears to be strongly on the side of the statesmen, and not Max Lowenthal.

It is probable that all Congressmen do not share Congressman Dondero's drastic opinion that no good American would care to be contaminated by Lowenthal's known presence. But a certain typical, very dry American skepticism of Lowenthal appears from the record of his testimony before the House Un-American Activities Comm. The testimony: Mr. Lowenthal: "The number of people that I didn't know were members of the Communist Party is something that sometimes makes my hair stand on end" . . . Mr. Russell: "Ours, too."

People Here Singing Without Any Sound

By Harman W. Nichols

THERE ARE two kinds of singers I like. A crooner you can't hear croon, and a female chirper who doesn't make any noise while chirping.

Art Lamb

To see him lip-moving on the screen and hear the tootles in the background, you'd think the handsome black-haired Art was der Bing himself. But nothing comes out.

As for the charming Aletha, ditto. She opens her pretty lips on the lady thrush records played on the longest continuous television show in the country—almost four full hours.

The performance of silent aping by Art and Aletha is unique, to say the least. Others have done it, to be sure, but not for four hours running, day after day.

And it takes practice.

ALETHA is a hard-working girl. She has a morning show of her own, but when she and Art decide on a new record they are going to work the lips on—without sound—she takes the thing home and practices while she does her ironing.

Art practices at home, too—when he can shush Art, junior, who often isn't easy to shush.

The Art Lamb show is one of the most informal you ever saw. The other day, Art learned that one of the studio porters was sporting a new pair of shoes. He called the man down off a ladder, got him in front of the cameras and made him show his new shoes.

It is not unusual for the M.C. to call a youngster up from the audience. And once in a while Art runs into trouble.

Like the other afternoon, when he asked a tousle-haired freckle-face to come up.

"What do you want for Christmas?" Art asked.

"That's none of your business," the young man replied. "That's something between me and Santa."

By the United Press

HOLLYWOOD (U.P.).—Walt Disney made a movie for television last week, but since TV still is a naughty word around here he calls it "just an experiment."

It's the first TV film to be shot in regular movie style by a bigtime movie producer and movie director with big stars and fancy sets.

Disney, though, says, shucks, it's really a nice plug for "Alice in Wonderland," his latest cartoon epic for theaters, where movies are said to be better than ever.

Explains Disney, "It's an experiment to find out how the television medium can tie up with motion pictures.

"We are going to find the pattern of how television can be used in such a way to enhance the theater value of pictures. I don't think television will interfere in the least with movies. They thought radio would hurt movies, too."

Disney's one-hour movie, "One Hour in Wonderland," will be released on 62 NBC television stations on Christmas Day. His cartoon family—Mickey Mouse, Pluto, Snow White, Donald Duck and Goofy—will make their TV debut in it via clips from their old movies.

The actors who worked in the TV film include Dean Stockwell, Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd, Kathryn Beaumont, the voice of Alice in "Alice in Wonderland," Disney, himself, and his two daughters, Diane and Sharon.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

More than 2000 residents of Bethesda area subdivisions received questionnaires last week, in connection with the protest which arose when Capital Transit proposed a reduction of service on the O-2 bus line. Philip A. Dieterich of 7227 Old Chester rd., Bethesda, Md., tells me that more than 35 percent of the recipients have already mailed in their completed forms — an amazing return. Those who haven't filled out their questionnaires yet are urged to do so at once . . . Next luncheon of the Anteaters Association (Zoo Park Restaurant, November 28, Columbia 3231 for reservations) will feature roast western black bear steaks. They were certainly delicious at last year's bear steak luncheon . . . Speaking of food, the Christmas Bazaar at the National Presbyterian Church, Connecticut ave. and N st. nw., on the 29th of this month will offer turkey dinners for those who haven't had their fill of turkey yet . . . Arthur Clarendon Smith, the moving man, is directing the local fund drive of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation (headed nationally by General Lucius D. Clay). . . . The Friendship Class of Arlington Methodist Church is collecting and repairing toys for distribution to charitable organizations in Arlington and Alexandria. Call King 8-7617 (Mrs. Neff), or Owens 3935 (Mrs. Hayes) for pickup service . . . M. C. Speiden of Cedar Croft Farm, Mitchells, Va., notes that Arlington residents are being asked to help crews at the new incinerator by separating "noninflammable materials like auto fenders and yard sweepings" from such inflammable objects as "regular trash, including bottles and tin cans." There must be some mighty tough grass in those yard sweepings, eh? . . . Those invalidated streetcar tokens are still coming in, to be turned over to Children's Hospital. The latest are from Mrs. Sidney S. Faber of 1407 L st. nw.; Mrs. Fred M. Glazier of 12306 Kendall st., Silver Spring, Md., whose daughter mailed them back from Detroit; and little Chipper Fitzpatrick of 5303 29th st. nw., who gurgles: "These turned up in my piggy bank." Hmmmmm! It's going to take more than streetcar tokens to pay for your college education, Chipper. Better tell your piggy bank to insist on money—and accept no substitutes.

OUR BILL DISCOVERS THE GREAT OUTDOORS

Shortly after 7 o'clock Thanksgiving morning our alarm clock set up its usual clatter. Nobody stirred, so I got up to turn it off.

"How about some breakfast?" I asked, nudging the mound of bedclothes across the way. The lady of the house grudgingly opened one eye a slit and said:

"Get your own breakfast for once. This isn't a school day, and I'm going to catch up on my sleep."

I got dressed and sniffed the nippy air coming through our bedroom window. "What a wonderful day for a pre-breakfast walk," I thought. "Besides, she'll be up by the time I get back, and I won't have to fry my own eggs."

It was a brisk morning, and provided an exhilaration that we office workers don't experience often enough these days.

I turned into the park and found the grass surprisingly green for this late in November. But the trees were already stripped for action, ready for their annual tussle with Old Man Winter.

The sharp, chill air smelled good as I drew it through nostrils accustomed to milder temperatures (usually seasoned with stale tobacco smoke). As I hiked on, I thought:

"It's easy to see where Harry Truman gets his ruddy glow, and his youthful zest. There's nothing like a morning walk to set a man up for a day's work."

The going is pretty rough in parts of Fort Dupont Park. But my new-found zeal took me ever onward and upward until, almost an hour later, I stood on what must be one of the highest points in the District, and looked down at the peaceful city.

It was a thrilling panorama, with the Capitol dome rising from the haze of its surroundings like a white cloud in a lowering sky.

By the time I returned home, I realized that I'd had more exercise than I bargained for. The inviting aroma of fresh coffee greeted me at the door, and in the kitchen I could see my lady breaking eggs on the side of a skillet.

"You must be starved," she said. "Get washed up and I'll put your breakfast on the table."

"Thanks," I said, "but I think I'll go back to bed for a while."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Offsetting China's Fear of U. S.

By Drew Pearson

There were two things that didn't meet the eye behind the President's recent statement that the United States had no military designs on China:

1. The State Department had tried to get General MacArthur to issue a somewhat similar statement but he refused.

PEARSON

2. The Russian radio is waging a terrific propaganda campaign to persuade the Chinese that the United States is about to bomb their major cities. That was why residents of Canton were panic-stricken over air-raid reports the other day.

To allay China's fears, Truman not only issued his sudden White House statement, but a copy of it was cabled to New Delhi, India, where Ambassador Loy Henderson handed it to Prime Minister Nehru. Henderson, explaining that he was acting on instructions from Washington, requested that the full text of Truman's statement be handed personally to Chinese President Mao Tse-tung in Peiping.

Incidentally, Henderson added that he did not want the Indian Ambassador in Peiping, Sardar Panniker, to add any comments of his own in delivering the statement. The reason for Ambassador Henderson's crack about Ambassador Panniker is because the latter is considered pro-Communist and has been muddying up relations between the United States and China. At one time, the State Department even requested Prime Minister Nehru to fire him.

Static Situation

The stage was set at the Pentagon the other day for some dramatic, two-way radio calls, opening the Military Amateur Radio System. This is a world-wide network of ham radio operators, which the Defense Department has organized for emergency communications.

At the climax of the dedication ceremony, Secretary for Air Finletter announced: "We will now contact an airplane in flight over the North Atlantic!"

Clearing his throat uneasily, Finletter tried again: "Now we will talk to Maj. Gen. Lyman Whitten sitting at his desk at Fort Pepperell in Newfoundland. Come in, General Whitten . . ."

But all that came in was "Bleep, bleep, bleep," then some static that sounded like an ethereal razzberry razz.

"That was certainly an interesting conversation," ad libbed Finletter. "That was about on the same plane as the last time the general and I talked."

Military Plans Cut

Top defense officials have been holding a series of secret meetings to prepare their budget estimates for President Truman. Their recommendations will probably set the domestic economy for the next two years—how much taxes will be increased, how high prices and wages will rise, and whether rationing and price controls will be ordered.

The meetings are still continuing, attended by Secretary of Defense Marshall, Undersecretary Lovett and the joint chiefs of staff. However, estimates have now been trimmed down by 10 billion dollars and the military budget will be approximately 45 billion dollars.

This will pay for about 80 Air Force groups, 18 Army divisions and 12 to 15 aircraft carriers. (This is 10 groups and 2 divisions less than originally planned.)

Press Censorship

How not to get along in Washington was recently illustrated by William Harrison, former head of International Telephone and Telegraph, and now head of the National Production Authority. Summoning his division chiefs, he categorically instructed them that at no time were any of them ever to talk to the press.

Actually, Harrison's division chiefs are highly important and responsible individuals, quite capable of using their judgment in press relations. Most of them believe that newspaper support is far more important to their job of increasing war production than Harrison is to the newspapers.

Washington Pipeline

John Steelman, assistant to the President, would not be averse to heading the New York Stock Exchange instead of Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder. Steelman has potent Paul Hoffman and movie czar Eric Johnston backing him . . . The Senate Armed Services Committee will be asked to investigate why General MacArthur, a Republican, made his sudden statement regarding Chinese troops just at the psychological moment before elections. (Democrats estimate the MacArthur statement cost them a million votes) . . . Senator Wayne Morse, Oregon Republican, transformed his trailer into a a chicken coop and brought 21 fat hens to Washington from Oregon with him . . . President Truman is hopping mad at most of the Democratic National Committee as a result of the election. He plans to reshuffle most of the committee—except for Chairman Bill Boyle.
